A Collection of Persian Tales, written expressly for the improvement of young Students, accompanied with an English translation, is now submitted to the candour of the Public.

The learned Orientalist will allow, that, to render into English such subjects with any degree of success, is no pleasant or easy task, on account of the difficulty of accommodating the sense to a different idiom, so as to preserve the spirit of the original, and at the same time avoid the ridiculous extremes of insipidity or bombast; and, therefore, such a critic will readily grant indulgence to a translation, which pretends to no merit but that of faithfulness and perspicuity.

After bestowing every kind of eulogy and praise on the Creator of heaven and earth, we proceed to set forth the nature and true intent of these pages, which is this. The narrations, tales, and fables of Hazerut Nekhsheby, (the mercy of the Almighty rest upon him!) in the Tootinameh, or Tales of a Parrot, being composed in a difficult and abstruse style, Mahommed Kadery (may God amend his condition!) for the sake of distinctness and illustration, and in order to render them intelligible to all descriptions of men, has written them in familiar and easy language, so as to comprise the epistolary style and ordinary conversation befitting persons of high rank. This is one of the above-mentioned Tales.

TALE THE FIRST.

Of the Birth of Miemun; and of Khojisteh falling in love.

ONE of the princes of former times, whose name was Ahmed Sultaun, possessed much riches and effects, with a numerous army, so that one hundred thousand horses, fifteen hundred chains of elephants, and nine hundred strings of camels of burthen, stood ready at his gate. But he had no children, neither son nor daughter. He therefore continually visited the worshippers of God, to engage their intercession in his favour; and day and night, morning and evening, was himself offering up prayers for a son. After some time had passed in this manner, the Creator of heaven and earth bestowed on the aforesaid king a son, of beautiful form, his countenance resplendent as the sun, and his forehead resembling the moon. From the delight occasioned by this event, the heart of Ahmed Sultaun expanded like a new-blown rose; he bestowed many thousand rupees and huns, or pagodas, on dervieshes and fakeers: for three months continuance,

In a short time he read the alphabet, with the Amudnameh, or conjugations of verbs, and by degrees the Insha Herkeren, the Gulistan, Jammia ul Kewaneen, Insha Abulsezul, Insha Yousefy, with the Rukaat Jami; and acquired complete skill in the Arabic and Persian sciences. He also learnt the ceremonies to be observed in the royal council, as well as the rules for conversation and deportment at an imperial banquet; and met with approbation in the sight of the king, and all the nobles of the court.

His father called him Miemun, or auspicious, and married him to a wife, whose body was fair as the silver moon, and her countenance enlivening as the sun. The name of this lady was Khojisteh, or prosperous. Between Miemun and Khojisteh there was such excessive intimacy, friendship, and affection, that every day, from evening till morning, they were inseparable: they slept in one place, and always sat together. day Miemun rode in a palkee to take a view of the market-place, where he beheld a person standing with a parrot-cage in his hand. Miemun said to the parrot-seller, Tell me what is the price of this bird? The parrot-seller answered, "The price of it is the sum of a thousand huns." Miemun replied, "The person who could give so large a sum of money for a handful of feathers, and a cat's morsel, must be an ignorant blockhead." To this, the parrotseller was unable to give an answer. interval, the parrot thought thus to itself, " If this rich man does not purchase me, his refusal will occasion evil and misfortune; for it is only by associating with great and intelligent minds, that the understanding can be improved." Then the parrot thus rejoined: "Oh beauteous youth! endowed with riches, and master of every accomplishment, although I appear in your sight nothing but a handful of feathers, yet, through the power of wisdom and knowledge, I can soar above the sky; and the eloquent are struck with wonder, and are astonished on listening to my sweet discourses. meanest art that I possess is, that any action of past time, or to come, I know at present: the business

Do you purchase all the spikenard in the place; hoard it up, and sell it after the arrival of these travelling merchants, from which traffic you will derive considerable advantage." Miemun, having heard, understood and approved the words of the parrot, gave the owner a thousand huns, the price of the bird; and having bought it, carried it to his own house. He sent for all the spikenard in the city, and asked the The spikenard dealers sellers the price thereof. said, "The price of the whole is ten thousand In the same hour he paid the aforesaid sum from his own treasury, and purchased the spikenard, which he stored up in one of his palaces. The third day, according as the parrot had predicted, the people of the caravan of Cabul arrived, and made great search amongst the merchants and traders, but could no where find out any spikenard, because Miemun had bought the whole of that article in the city. The people of the caravan came into the presence of Miemun, and having bought the spikenard for the sum of fifty thousand huns, set out for their own city. At length Miemun was much pleased and delighted with the conversation of the parrot, and bought another bird called a sharuk, or mina, with the view that, by placing it in company with the parrot, the mind of the latter might be freed from the irksomeness of solitude; according to the saying of the sages.

"Kind fly with kind, pigeon with pigeon, hawk "with hawk."

The intention of Miemun in placing the sharuk along with the parrot, was, that these birds might be mutually pleased with the company of each other. One day Miemun said to Khojisteh, "I am now "going to perform a journey to a certain country, "and shall also make a voyage in order to visit "several ports. Whenever you have business to "transact, or any weighty affair occurs, carry your "intentions into execution, without the advice and "consent of the parrot and the sharuk." After speaking to this purport, he commenced his journey. Khojisteh

Khojisteh expressed great sorrow at the departure of Miemun; and being separated from the possesser of her heart, she neither slept during the night, nor ate in the day. To be brief, the parrot dispelled the sorrows of her heart, by relating pleasant stories. At the expiration of six months, one day Khojisteh, after having bathed herself, and adorned her person, was looking out of a window at the top of the house into the street; when a prince of another country, who had travelled into this city, having beheld the glowing cheeks of Khojisteh, was distracted with love; and Khojisteh also was fascinated at the sight of the prince. The same hour the prince sent a procuress to Khojisteh, privately, with a message, that provided she would only take the trouble to visit his house any night, for four hours, he, in return for this condescension, would present her with a ring estimated at a lack of huns. At first, however, she did not agree to his proposal: but at length the instigations of the procuress prevailed:

vailed; and she returned him for answer, that as day reveals, and night casts a veil over our actions, she would wait upon the prince after midnight. Early at night, after having arrayed herself in her finest and best apparel, she repaired to the sharuk, and sitting down in a chair, thus reflected in her mind: "Because I am woman, and the sharuk is also a " female, she will certainly listen to my words on the " present occasion, and give me leave to visit the " prince." With this persuasion, she represented to the sharuk all the particular circumstances of her The sharuk advised her, saying, "You " must not commit such an action, which is con-" sidered amongst your tribe as most heinous and "disgraceful." But as love had now gained the ascendancy over Khojisteh, the sharuk's refusal threw her into a rage. Seizing the bird fast by both legs, she pulled her out of her cage, and struck her against the ground with such violence that the soul took flight from the body, and she expired. full of wrath and indignation, she came to the D parrot.

After making this reflection, he thus addressed himself to Khojisteh, in the softest tone imaginable: "The sharuk was a female, many of " whom are deficient in wisdom; for which reason, " those who are wise themselves, ought not to re-" veal their secrets to any of the sex. Be not " now uneasy or unsettled in your mind; for, as " long as my soul continues in my body, I will exert " my endeavours in this business of yours, and will " gratify your inclinations. God forbid it should " actually so happen! but if this secret of yours " should be divulged, and your husband hear of it, " I will make peace and tranquillity between you and "him, like the parrot of Ferukh Beg." Khojisteh asked, "What is the story of the parrot of Ferukh "Beg? Tell it at full length, and you will oblige " me."

The parrot replied, "In a certain country was " a merchant, named Ferukh Beg, in whose house " was a sagacious parrot. This merchant, having " occasion to travel; gave in charge to the par-" rot all his goods and chattels, and also his wife. " After which he set out on his journey, in order " to trade in different countries; and continued " absent some time, transacting his commercial " concerns. Shortly after his departure, his " wife became acquainted and enamoured with a " young Moghul into her house; they slept in one " bed, and continued together in the same apart-" ment till morning. The parrot saw these pro-" ceedings, and overheard all their conversation; "however he was as secret as if he had neither " seen nor heard. At the expiration of a year and " a half the merchant returned home, and inquired " of the parrot all the particulars concerning his " household. The parrot informed the merchant " of ail the affairs of his house; but did not tell " any circumstances concerning the woman, because " it would have occasioned a separation between man " and wife. ### TALE THE SECOND.

The Fidelity of a Sentinel towards the King of Teberistan.

WHEN the day was entirely spent, and night arrived, Khojisteh arose from the costly couch; and having called for different kinds of food, and various fruits, ate thereof. She composed her countenance with a benignity resembling the moon; and, having adjusted her head attire, and put on apparel of rich brocade, came to the parrot for permission to visit the prince.

The parrot said to her, "Be-cheerful, without "thinking or contriving, for I will be zealous and "active in your cause, and be the means of intro-"ducing you to the prince's presence; but you, "Khojisteh, must preserve for him, in your mind, "such friendship, benevolence, ardour, and affection,

TALE THE THIRD.

The Goldsmith and the Carpenter; and the Theft and Concealment of the Golden Images.

WHEN the sun was set, and the moon risen, Khojisteh, having covered herself with gold and jewels, went to the parrot, and said, "Give me leave to re"pair to my sweet-heart to-night." The parrot answered, "I gave you permission the first night,
"why do you loiter till now? but it is not advise"able that you should go and appear before the man
"bedecked in these ornaments, lest he may covet
"them, and quit his affection for you; just as the "goldsmith, who coveted the carpenter's gold, and
"abandoned a friendship of many years standing."

Khojisteh having desired to hear the detail of the story, the parrot repeated it as follows:

"they began to worship.

"The other Brahmins, beholding their mode of worshipping, were so much ashamed that every day one or two Brahmins left the temple, and did not return; and if any person questioned them why they had done so, they would say, Because we men are not able to perform the ceremonies in the manner that these two persons go through them; on which account we feel shame. "When they arrived in the neighbourhood of their own city, they buried the images under a tree, and then went to their respective homes. One night the goldsmith went alone, and carried all the images to his own house. In the morning he exclaimed against the carpenter, saying, Thief! thou hast forgotten our long friendship, and stolen my share: this money you will devour in a few days. At first the carpenter was astonished, and said to himself, What is that he saith? O gold-smith! I suspect your doings; but, however, for God's sake, don't fix any accusation on me! The carpenter was a shrewd fellow, and seeing that it was to no purpose to wrangle or dispute, remained silent.

"Some time after, the carpenter made a figure of wood resembling the goldsmith, and having dressed it in his clothes, got from some place or other, two bears' cubs, whose victuals he put into the skirts and sleeves of the clothes on the figure. ### TALE THE FOURTH.

The Nobleman and the Soldier's Wife, whose Virtue he put to the proof.

WHEN the sun was set, and the moon had risen, Khojisteh came to the parrot, and said, "You pay "no regard to my anguish: know you not that I "am distracted with love? Give me leave this very "night to go to my sweet-heart." The parrot replied, "My own breast is inflamed and torn on account of your sorrow. For, as you will hear my tales every night, instead of going to your lover, I am afraid lest your husband arrive, and you get shame with your sweet-heart, in the same manner as the soldier's wife put to confusion the nobleman." Khojisteh desired to hear the story.

TALE THE FIFTH.

The Goldsmith, the Carpenter, the Taylor, and the Hermit, who quarrelled about a Wooden Woman.

WHEN the sun descended into the west, and the moon arose from the east, Khojisteh went to the parrot to ask leave, and said, "Give me permission this "night to go to my lover." The parrot answered, "My princess, I have given you leave every night; why do you tarry? I am afraid your husband may arrive unexpectedly, and matters fall out like what happened to four persons."

Khojisteh desiring to hear the story, the parrot said, Once on a time, a goldsmith, a carpenter, a taylor, and a hermit, travelling together, halted one night in a desert place, and said amongst themselves, We shall continue in this desert to-night, and keep guard, us four persons taking a watch a-piece; to "which words they unanimously agreed. When " night was ended, and the sun arose, all these four " persons were desperately in love with the figure. "The carpenter said, I am the master of this wo-" man, because I carved her with my own hands: " I will take her. The goldsmith said, She ought " to be my bride, seeing that I have decked her " with jewels. The taylor asserted, This woman is " my property, for when she was naked I made " clothes and dressed her. The hermit said, This " was a figure of wood, which having obtained life " at my prayers, I will take her. In short, this " dispute had continued a long time, when acci-"dentally there came to the spot a person whom "they desired to do justice between them. When "this man saw the woman's face, he exclaimed, "This is my lawful spouse, whom you have seduced " from my house and separated from me. After "this manner, he seized and carried them before "the Cutwal. When the Cutwal beheld the wo-" man's countenance, he cried out, This is my " brother's wife, whom he took with him on a "journey:

For a long time past I have been inquiring after this woman; she is my bondmaid, who absconded with a great deal of my money; now, where is my money and effects? give an answer.

"When this quarrel and altercation had run to great length, and many people were collected together to see the sight, an old man, who was present, said, This dispute will not be decided by any man: but in such a city there is a large old tree, called the Tree of Decision; every dispute that men are unable to determine, is carried before this tree, from which a voice issues, declaring on whose side there is justice, and whose claim is false. To shorten the story, these seven men went under the tree, and also carried the woman along with them;

خود کا پیش آن درخت عرض کردند در حال تنبه درخت مشکافت و آن زن دویده دران مشکافت و تنبه درخت پیوست و کم مشد و از ان درخت اواز بر آمد که برچیز بطرف اصل خود میرود و بفت عاشق آن زن شرمنده شدند

" and each of them set forth the circumstances of his "particular case. On the instant, the trunk of the "tree divided asunder, and the woman ran into the "cleft, upon which the tree reunited, and she disap-"peared. A voice proceeded from the tree, that "every thing returns to its first principles; and the seven suitors for the woman were overwhelmed "with shame."

The parrot having concluded this tale, said to Khojisteh, "Mistress, I am apprehensive your husband "may come unexpectedly; and, like the tree, unite "you to himself, and you get shame with your lower: arise and go towards your sweet-heart and friend." Khojisteh intended to have gone to him, at which instant the cock crowed, and the signs of morning appeared, when her visit was put off.

TALE THE SIXTH.

The King of Kinoje and his Daughter, with whom a Dirveish became enamoured.

WHEN the sun sunk beneath the west, and the moon arose from the east, Khojisteh, completely decked and ornamented, went to the parrot to ask leave, saying, "I am ashamed to appear before you, "and that you should have so much trouble for my sake: you neither sleep nor take rest; how shall "I thank you for your favours? how can my tongue "perform and utter it?" The Fowler, the Parrot, and her Young Ones.

WHEN the sun sunk into the west, and the moon came out of the east, Khojisteh, with a heart full of anguish, and eyes replete with tears, arose, and went to the parrot for leave. Beholding the parrot full of thought, she said, "Why are you pensive?" The parrot replied, "On your account; because I know "not what kind of lover yours is—whether he will be faithful to you or not, and act like the parrot of King Kamrew." Khojisteh asked, "What is "the nature of the story of King Kamrew's parrot?" The parrot began relating the story:—"Once on a time a fowler threw a net over the nest of a parrot, and imprisoned therein the parrot together with her young. The parrot said to her nestlings,

The Merchant, and his Wife, who outwitted him.

WHEN the sun sunk into the west, and, it being night, the moon ascended from the east, Khojisteh, with a sad and aching heart, got up and went to the parrot, in quest of leave. The parrot, observing Khojisteh pensive, asked why she was thoughtful? Khojisteh answered, "Because I come to you every night and disclose to you my sorrow; when then will be the time that I shall meet my lover? If you give me leave this night, I shall go; otherwise, I will exercise patience, and sit at home." The parrot answered, "You listen to my stories every night, and continue here till morning. The Lion and the Brahmin, who, on account of his Avarice, lost his Life.

WHEN the sun was set, and the moon risen, Khojisteh went to the parrot for leave, and said, "I am sensible you do not trouble yourself about my unesainess, and on that account do not dispatch me, but introduce tales." The parrot said, "I wish to God, Khojisteh, that you would go speedily to your lover! You yourself make the delay; it is no fault of mine. Go quickly, to-night; but you must return soon, and do not covet any thing that is there; for inordinate desire is sinful, and whosoever is avaricious, will meet with the same fate as the brahmin." Four rich Persons who became poor.

WHEN the sun descended into the caverns of the west, and the moon came out of the east, Khojisteh, with aching breast and weeping eyes, went to the parrot, and said, "Alas, you green coat! the sorrows of love overwhelm me; every night you make me lose my time by your admonitions and discourse: "I am in love, of what use is admonition to me?" The parrot replied, "My mistress! what a speech is this? However, the words of friends ought to be attended to; and they who refuse to hearken to the voice of friends, will repent it, as a certain person did." Khojisteh desired to hear the story.

WHEN the sun descended into the west, and the moon rose in the east, Khojisteh went to the parrot to ask leave. Seeing the parrot sitting pensive, she said, "Why are you thoughtful?" The parrot replied, "You are of a great family, I know not whether "your lover is also of noble descent. If his family "is found to be great, like yours, there can be no harm in forming a friendship with him, nay it is "desirable; but otherwise it should be avoided." Khojisteh answered, "Alas! guardian of my secret, "you say true; how can I learn his character?" #### TALE THE THIRTY-THIRD.

The Emperor of China, in a dream, falls in love with the Queen of Room.

WHEN the sun had set, and the moon was risen, Khojisteh, full of thought, went to the parrot, and said, "O thou, who art my associate! I have heard " that some one asked a great man, What is love? " prised of this mystery, entertained unfavourable " suspicions; and when the king returned, told him " what he had discovered. The king was afflicted, " and said to himself, This woman, by practising de-" ceit, has brought her lover here. Immediately he " entered the haram; the woman, plainly perceiving " that the king had learnt the circumstances of the " preceding night, said, Why are you thoughtful? "The king rejoined, Why should I not be thought-" ful? You, by your artifice, have called your gal-" lant hither from Room, and have lain with him: "what audaciousness and impudence is this? He " wanted to have punished her, but was restrained " by his affection. He said to himself, I must re-" venge myself on this boy. He accordingly said " to some one, Take this boy into a private place, " and immediately separate his head from his body. "The man, when he took him from thence, said to " him, O youth! were you not apprised that she is " the king's wife, and why did you go in? He said, "I am her own son by a former husband; she is " my mother; through delicacy she avoided men-" tioning it to the king. You have the power either " to kill me, or to spare my life; I have told the " truth.

" truth. The executioner, on hearing these words, " was filled with compassion, and said to himself, " Perhaps this secret will one day be discovered to "the king, who may require the boy at my hands, " and will then repent. It is, at all events, most " adviseable that this boy should not be killed for " some time: in short, he did not put him to death. "The next day he went to the king and said, I have "killed the boy. The king's anger was a little " abated, but he had no confidence remaining in his " wife. The queen wondered what would be the " issue; her son being slain, and her husband's af-" fection lost. " this-My wife sent to Room for a slave, who is " her gallant; I have killed the slave, but cannot " prevail on myself to put to death my wife; because " my suspicions may be true, or they may be false. "The old woman said, I have an amulet; when " your wife is asleep, place it on her bosom, and "whatever she says in her sleep will be true. The "king said, Bring the amulet quickly. " woman gave it to the king immediately; and then " going to the queen, told her, When the king shall " place the amulet on your bosom, feign yourself " asleep, and tell the whole story truly. After the " first watch of the night, the king having placed the " amulet on his wife's bosom, she related all the par-"ticulars about her former husband, and her son. "When the king comprehended the story, he kissed " his wife's face and hair, and said, Why did you con-" ceal from me this secret? The wife said, Because " I was ashamed. The king immediately sent for " the murderer, and said, Where is the tomb of the " youth you killed? The man answered, I did not " kill him; he is still alive. " the mother saw her son, she embraced him, and " praised God,"

The parrot, having brought the tale to this period, said to Khojisteh, "My mistress, do you also, "if any difficulty should occur, assert your own "purity. Now arise, and go to your friend." Khojisteh wanted to have gone; instantly the cock crowed, and dawn appearing, her departure was deferred.

It so happened that on that very day Miemun returned from his journey. Upon not seeing the Sharuck, he asked what was become of her? Khojisteh had not yet opened her lips in order to have given an answer, when the parrot said, "Require of me a relation of all the advenures of the Sharuck and of Khojisteh." Miemun said, "Speak!" The parrot related to Miemun, from beginning to end, all the particulars of Khojisteh falling in love with the young man, and how the Sharuck was killed by the hands of Khojisteh. Miemun immediately put an end to the life of Khojisteh.
