FOREWORD.

The 'science of religion' has in the last fifty years developed and progressed in many ways. We have the comparative, the historical, the sociological and the psychological methods. Of late a new school has arisen which is well-exemplified by its forerunner James (Varieties of religious Experience), and latterly by Otto (Das Heilige and Die Religionen), a school which relegates history and philology to the background to concentrate in the first place on the religious experience itself. Pratt in his recent work The Pilgrimage of Buddhism applies the principle in a practical way and rightly says: "To give the feeling of an alien religion it is necessary to do more than expound its concepts and describe its history. One must catch its emotional undertone, enter sympathetically into its sentiments, feel one's way into its symbols, its cult, its art, and then seek to impart these things not merely by scientific exposition but in all sorts of indirect ways." Non scholae sed vitae is the motto of this school.

Nevertheless, history and philology will remain indispensable accessories. And also in the historical method there is development and subdivision. A group of phenomena of great interest and importance, but scarcely as yet touched upon, is the one furnished by what may be called the symbiotics of religion. In Europe, the confluence of paganism and Christianity has submerged all paganism without destroying it. In Java, the confluence of Indonesian animism, Hinduism and Islam has produced a doctrinal, terminological and sentimental complex which is difficult to analyse and is an example of permeation without suppression. In China, Confucianism and Buddhism have remained unmixed side by side, whilst Buddhism has intimately influenced Taoism, chiefly in the In India, likewise, Hinduism and Islam have remained popular strata. oil and water, though a subtle influence has perhaps been exercised upon later Islamic mysticism and magic by the surrounding Hindu atmosphere. On the contrary the purely artificial individual endeavours of an Akbar and a Dārā Shikūh to introduce Hindu thought and speculation into Persian literature have remained almost completely isolated and sterile. A little literary theological island has been created which has remained uninhabited and from which no travellers have undertaken further voyages into the world of Islam. The rich and fertile results of the introduction of Greek thought into the Arabic and the mediaeval western world is in this instance counterbalanced by an entire lack of consequences, and the effort was still-born. Nevertheless syncretistic and irenistic tendencies are always interesting and deserve attention. The sharply defined and definitely circumscribed literary activity of the few notable Muhammadans who have sought to transplant Indian thought into the Islamic world is of such a nature and moreover connected with incidents of human and dramatic value.

It is difficult to decide where to begin in this study: with the artificial endeavours of rulers like Akbar or Dārā Sbikūh or with those of humbler mystics without autocratic influence. One might either prefer to approach the problem through translations such as the Persian translation of the Upanisads or through systematic treatises such as the one that forms the subject of the present volume. The whole subject has been scarcely touched. Speyer in his De Indische Theosophic has in one of his chapters dealt with the influence of Indian theosophy on the West and has shortly spoken about Kabir, the Sikhs, Akbar, and Ram Mohan Roy. De Massignon has recently published and translated the conversations between Dārā Shikūh and Bābā Lāl Dās. 'Abdul Walī has dealt with the relations between Dārā Shikūh and Sarmad (Journal, A.S.B., Vol. XX). The most fundamental discussion, however, hitherto, of Indian influence on Muhammadan mysticism seems M. Horten's Indische Strömungen in der islamischen Mystik (Heidelberg 1927 and 1928). The two parts of the work contain ample bibliographical references.

Now Professor Mahfuz-ul-Haq comes, in the present publication, with a contribution of singular interest for this subject. It is not that this "Mingling of the two Oceans" proves to be a book of deep insight or great spirituality. On the contrary, it seems poor in spirit and largely verbal. But it gives us a starting point. From this little book we can work backwards and forwards. It is an apt focus for further research.

Professor Haq, by his painstaking translation, and by the fullness of his annotation, has deserved well of his readers and has made easy the task of students in this particular field who may be neither Sanskritists nor Persianists. Above all, by his careful and straightforward work he has taken away a false glamour with which the tragic death of its author had endowed the booklet as long as it remained sealed. But in this connection a word of caution suggests itself. We feel that the absence of the glow of true inspiration in the treatise is obvious. But is this poverty of quality a true measure of Dārā's attitude and endowments? From other data known concerning him it is legitimate to regard this question as one open to a certain measure of doubt. Have we not rather to esteem the matter-of-fact substance and the terminological comparisons of the treatise not as the measure of his vision but as the measure of his pru-After all he was executed as a heretic. Could he in his time and in his circumstances have said more than he did in this work without danger of dire consequences? All these are matters of speculation, but of great human interest. We shall only know for certain when his whole œuvre is made accessible to us, and we are grateful to Professor Haq for having made a beginning. Dārā Shikuh, whether he was great of soul or only an aristocratic but small dabbler in great things, will remain a tragic figure in human history. As the last continuator of a short line of activity begun by his great-grandfather, the great Akbar, he is also an historical figure in the development of Indian thought. For all these and many other reasons we welcome the present work in which from beyond the gulf of death the voice of Hindu-Muslim Unity has been given life again, insistent, sincere, and tragic.

INTRODUCTION.

Dārā Shikūh, the author of the present work, was born at Ajmīr, (Monday night, the 29th Ṣafar, 1024 A.H.),¹ the city hallowed by the memory of the great mystic, Muʻīnuddīn Chishtī, whose tomb there has, for centuries past, been visited by the devoted followers of the Prophet. Dārā's father, Shāhjahān, had also frequented the tomb of the celebrated saint and prayed earnestly for the birth of a son, for his two eldest children had been daughters.² The prayer was accepted, as it is said, and Dārā's birth was naturally hailed with the outburst of feelings of joy by his devoted parents.

The prince himself records the circumstances attending his birth, while noticing the life of Mu'inuddin Chishtī, in his Safīnat-ul-Awliyā: 3

"And this faķīr was born in the suburbs of Ajmīr, by the (lake of) Sāgar Tāl, on the last day of Ṣafar, Monday midnight, 1024 A.H. As in the house of my respected father three daughters had been born and there were no male issues and (as) the age of His Majesty had reached twenty-four, he, on account of the faith and devotion that he had for the Khwāja (i.e. Mu'inuddīn Chishtī) prayed, with thousand presentations and supplications, for the birth of a son. And with His grace God, the Most High, brought this meanest slave of his (i.e. Dārā Shikūh) into existence who hopes that He will grant him the grace of doing good and will bring to his host His goodwill and that of His friends. Āmīn, Oh, Lord of the world." Thus, it is a happy coincidence that Dārā who was born at the city of a great mystic and divine turned out to be a devout Ṣūfī and a 'man of the Path' throughout his life.

EARLY LIFE.

We know very little about Dārā's early life, for the Mughal historians, who have primarily been the chroniclers of the political events occurring in the State, give us very scanty information on the subject, and the first glimpse that we get of him is at the time when he is handed over to Jahangir 1 as a hostage on behalf of his rebel father, Khurram, and jealously guarded by his step-grandmother, Nür Jahan. Dara was detained at Lahore up to the date of Shāhjahān's accession (1037 A.H.=1627 A.D.).2 When Dara Shikuh returned to Agra he was about 13 years old and it must have been about this time that Shāhjahān would have given earnest and serious attention to imparting higher education to him. But there is nothing on record, so far as I know, to show how far Dārā Shikūh had progressed in his studies and what special endeavours had been made by his father to educate him in accordance with the best traditions of the Mughals. Court Historians inform us of is not about the progress made by Dārā in his study of Philosophy 3 or Caligraphy but of the showering of royal favours, in the form of presents and gifts and promotions in official rank, etc. But we must confess that such matters can hardly interest They can only be used profitably by a chronicler of Dārā's political history and not by one who aims at tracing the literary attainments of this illustrious prince. So, I am constrained to pass over the many unimportant events recorded in the official and non-official histories of the reigns of Shāhjahān and Aurangzīb, and would only make a passing reference to some of the more important ones.

Dārā, as is generally known, was the most loved child of Shāh-jahān and, as such, the Emperor did not like to lose his company by sending him to distant provinces. The other princes, Shujā', Murād and Aurangzīb, were sent out as provincial governors but Dārā, "the eldest child of the Khilāfat," was kept at the Imperial Court, under the very eyes of his fond father who was unwilling to part company with him. This excess of love was unfortunate in two ways: it aroused the jealousy of the other princes and shut out Dārā from gaining first-hand experience as a soldier and an administrator. Undoubtedly, he was appointed governor of the provinces of Allahabad 1 and the Panjāb,2 but he was allowed to live at the capital and rule through his agents. This rule by proxy could hardly make him experienced. He also led the Kandhär campaign in 1053 A.H.3 But, from the accounts of the campaign, it is apparent that it was not like an expedition led to a distant land or a march through difficult and perilous territory but rather the triumphant pageant of a victorious general. The expedition was unsuccessful, so was the previous one led by Aurangzib. But it cannot be denied that Dārā made certain tactical blunders and the over-concern of his father for him hastened his recall; 4 the task being thus left unaccomplished.

It will appear, therefore, that Dara was more a man of the court than of the camp; but it cannot be denied, at the same time, that he possessed an extraordinary capacity for adaptability. A prince who had passed his days in the luxuries of a most magnificent Mughal court, would have been expected to be utterly hopeless in the field of action; but we find that Dara can compose himself, he can adjust himself to his environment and can face the frowns of fortune with a dignified countenance and a lofty resignation. In the struggle for succession, which followed the illness of Shihjahan, in 1067 A.H., Dārā displayed all his latent powers of organisation and generalship; but he was no match for the sun-dried diplomat and general-Aurang-The three brothers Shuja', Aurangzib and Murad were marching on Agra with a well-equipped and trained army and Darâ had to face them with all the resources at his disposal. He sent his son Sulaiman Shikuh against Shuja', who was routed and turned back, but, before Sulaiman could come to the rescue of his father, the latter had been defeated by the combined forces of Aurangzib and Murād, at Samūgarh (7th Ramadan, 1068 A.H.). The battle of Samugarh scaled the fate of Dārā, who fled to Āgra, thence to Lahore, Multān, Bhakkar, Gujarāt and Cutch. He returned and fought with Aurangzib but only to be turned back after an ignominious defeat. The flight of Dārā is a very painful episode of suffering, privation and misery. His companions deserted him, his best supporters left him and the climax of calamities was reached when Nādira Begam, his dearest and best loved wife, was snatched away by the cruel hand of Death. Dārā presented a miserable figure; he was a broken man, and resigned himself to the will of God. His sufferings, however, were soon to end. He was captured by Malik Jiwan of Dadar, his Afghān host, and brought to Delhi under the escort of Aurangzīb's generals and paraded through the streets on a large elephant. He underwent a mock trial at the hands of Aurangzīb's 'Ulamā and was found guilty of apostasy from Islām. The younger brother passed orders for his execution, which was carried out on the night of Wednesday, 21st Dhul Ḥijja, 21069 A.H. So died Dārā, the eldest son of Shāhjahān and the would-be emperor of Hindūstān.

DĀRĀ AS AN AUTHOR.

A perusal of the writings of Dārā Shikūh will make it abundantly clear that he had Ṣūfistic leanings from a very early age. He Ind.), pp. 34-36, in which the charges are enumerated in some detail, and p. 432 where the immediate reasons of the execution are given; Muntakhab-ul-Lubāb, (Bib. Ind.), ii, p. 87, in which Dārā is accused of vilifying Taṣawwif; Manucci, Sloria Do Mogor, i, pp. 356-358, gives a very graphic account of the execution but makes the highly incredible statement that Dārā wanted to embrace Christianity in his last moments; Bernier's account (Travels, p. 100), is brief; J. N. Sarkar (Aurangzib, i, pp. 296-299 and ii, pp. 213-219) gives the best account based, among others, on Tārīkh-i-Shāh Shujā' of Mīr Muḥammad Ma'ṣūm.

² 'Alamgīrnāma, (Bib. Ind.), 432. According to Maūthir-i-'Ālamgīrī, (Bib. Ind.), p. 27, Dārā was executed on the night of Thursday, the 21st Dhul Ḥijja; the author of 'Amal-i-Ṣāliḥ (Elliott vii, p. 244) records on the 26th Dhul Ḥijja, Khāfī Khān (Muntakhab-ul-Lubāb, ii, p. 87) says that Dārā was executed on the last (ūkhir) day of Dhul Ḥijja, (i.e. 29th), while Muftī Ghulām Sarwar (Khazīnat-ul-Arfiyā, i, p. 174), records the date of execution on the 1st Muḥarram, 1070 A.H., which is evidently wrong. H. Blochmann (J.A.S.B., xxxix, i, p. 277) accepts the 21st Dhul Ḥijja and says that it was Tuesday evening. He observes:—

[&]quot;The last day (29th Zi Hajjah) of the year 1069 coincides with Wednesday. 7th September, 1659. Hence the 21st Zi Hajjah is Tuesday, 30th August. The Muhammadan Historian says, Dérá was killed on a Wednesday evening. This fully agrees with our computation; for the Muhammadan Wednesday commenced on Tuesday, 6 o'clock r.m."

had studied the well-known works of the Suffs of Islam and had examined their contents very closely and minutely. We find him making very apt quotations from the works of the various masters of Süfism and also deducing relevant, but mostly independent, conclusions from the Holy Kur'an and the Traditions of the Prophet. He appears to be independent in his judgment and bold in his conclusions. He does not seem to make a fetish of the stereotyped dogmas nor, necessarily, follows the beaten path. His studies in Süfism lead him to the conclusion that Truth is not the exclusive property of any particular or 'chosen' race but that it can be found in all religions and at all times. But this conclusion was not reached in one day. It was the result of deep study and continued association with the divines of different religions and the Suffs of various shades of opinion. This gradual development of the mental attitude of Dara is a very interest. ing study. His is a mind which advances from the commonplace to the sublime. We can have some idea of this gradual advancement from a perusal of the various works and their contents, a firt of which I give here in their chronological order:

In the introduction to the work Dārā styles himself, as he has done in most of his later works, Hanafī, Kādirī, namely, a follower of Imām Abū Hanifa and a Murīd of the order which owes its origin to Shaikh 'Abdul Kādir of Gīlān, and concludes by hoping that his (i.e. Dārā's) future may be happy through the grace of the many divines and mystics whose lives he has noticed in this work.

2. Sakīnat-ul-Awliyā.—This is Dārā's second work which he wrote in his 28th year (p. 134),¹ in 1052 A.H. (p. 6), dealing with the biography of Mīyān Mīr, or Mīyān Jīv, the spiritual guide of his Pīr and Murshid, Mullā Shāh,² called Lisānullāh, and his many disciples. Dārā Shikūh writes in the introduction to this work that on a certain Thursday, in the 24th year of his life, an angel cried out to him, in his dream, that he will get such a reward from God as has not been bestowed on any previous king, and the fulfilment of this message came on the 29th Dhul Ḥijja, 1049, when he was initiated into the Kādirī order by Mullā Shāh, who, according to Dārā, was the greatest divine of his time. Dārā, besides noticing at considerable length the lives of Mīyān Jīv, his sister Jamāl Khātūn, and his many disciples, the most notable among whom is Mullā Shāh, discusses various Ṣūſistic and religious problems, such as the need of a spiritual guide, the way to find him, the desirability or otherwise of Samā' (or engagement in hearing esoteric songs), the problem of the vision of God (or rūyat), etc. In short, the work is replete with interesting discussions on the various problems of the Path and can be read with profit by the serious students of Ṣūſism. It appears that Dārā has supported his arguments by reference to or quotations from the various standard works of Tradition or Ṣūſism and the names of the following works, to which Dārā has referred in this book, may serve to give an idea of the extensive studies of this prince: Kashſ-ul-Mahjūb (p. 5). Tārīkh-i-Yāſi'ī (p. 13), Mu'jam-ul-Buldān (p. 14), Ṣaḥūḥ Muslim (p. 24), Mishkāt (p. 24), Baḥr-ul-Ḥaḥā'iḥ (p. 63), Taſsīr-i-Sullamī, (p. 63), Taſsīr-i-Ārā'is (p. 64). Taſsīr-i-Kubsharī (p. 64), Faṣl-ul-Khitāb (p. 65), Takmila (p. 81), Taſsīr-i-Ḥusainī (p. 135).

And in Havell's Indian Painting and Sculpture, (London, 1908), there is a fine painting, reproduced in colour, in which Mullā Shāh and Chwāja 'Abdullāh are seen sitting opposite to Miyūn Jīv, and in E. Blochet's Les Enluminures des Manuscrits Orientaux (Paris, 1926), there is a portrait of Dūrū Shikūh and Mullā Shāh, which the learned author could not identify.

This work is also valuable in another way, namely, that it gives us an insight into the relation which existed between Darā and Miyān Jiv and Mulla Shah. He first meets Miyan Jiv in the company of his father, Shāhjahān, in 1043 A.H.,1 and the immediate effect of this meeting is his complete recovery from the serious malady he had been suffering from for the last four months (pp. 38, 39). The second visit of Dārā, which was also paid in company of his father 2, produces a still greater effect on him. He goes bare-footed to the upper storey of Miyan div's house and, out of reverence to the saint, gathers the chewed clove thrown away by him. Next, he goes to him alone and pays him homage by placing his hands at his feet (p. 41). This opened the portals of Divine mysteries on Dārā and Mivan Mir pronounced him to be his "very life and vision," (p. 42). And it was through the kindness of Miyan Mir that Dara received lessons in Mushahida (or, Beholding of God) and also witnessed the Lailat-ul-Kadr, on the 27th Ramadan, 1050 A.H. The relations that existed between Dara and his spiritual guide, Mulla Shāh, were more intimate and endured up to the latter's death, in It is impossible to reproduce even in brief the many 1072 A.H. personal reminiscences of Dārā's relations with Mullā Shāh which the former has recorded in the Salīna, but the following extract from the letters which the latter wrote to Dārā may serve to show the esteem in which the prince was held by his Pīr and Murshid. He writes: ".. I repose much trust in your wisdom and understanding.." (Letter No. 1, p. 140). "You are well informed of divine mysteries.." (Letter No. 3, p. 141).... "O! temporal and spiritual King.." (Letter No. 9, p. 147), etc.

Moreover, Mullā Shāh has written a special Ghazal in which he has exalted the spiritual attainments of Dārā Shikūh. He writes ¹:—

The first and the second Sāḥib Kirān (namely Amīr Tīmūr and Shāhjahān) are the kings of grandeur, (while) our Dārā Shikūh is the Sāḥib Kirān of heart.

From the universe, the provision of the two worlds, he has brought under his grip on account of the merchandise of his heart.

We also learn from the Sakinat-ul-Awliyā that Mullā Shāh had asked Dārā to impart spiritual instructions to the murids; but the 'Ulamā who were known to Dārā dissuaded him from doing so (p. 135). He took omen from the $Kur'\bar{a}n$ which was favourable to him but it appears that he never actually engaged himself in imparting spiritual instructions. Mullā Shāh exhorted Dārā, on the eve of his departure to Kashmīr. "to advise the companions $(y\bar{a}rs)$ as he was the wisest among them"; and Dara, in his turn, requested him to pray for his future salvation (p. 138). It also appears that Mulla Shah was of opinion that the propagation of the Kādirī mission in India would take place at the hands of the prince (p. 139). Of the religious exercises in which Dārā engaged himself, there is one which deserves special mention, namely, his exercise of restraining the breath. He writes, "One day he (Mulla Shah) said that the exercise of restraining the breath which prevails in our order is absent from all others, and is extremely difficult to perform. taught me the method which is peculiar to this order. Of the exercises in which I engaged myself in the beginning (of my spiritualistic career), this is one and, as a result, I could pass the whole night, whether it be long or short, in two breaths and, at times, my condition became such as if my life was going to be extinct."

Risāla-i-Hak Numā, or 'the Compass of the Truth,' is the third work of Dārā Shikūh. It is a small tract of some thirty pages 1 dealing with the various stages of spiritual development and discussing the ways and means of reaching the highest pitch of spiritual perfection. prince writes in the introduction that "none should read this Risāla unless he has got the companionship of some perfect (divine)" (p. 6). Further. he adds that this tract is a compendium of Futuhāt, Fusus-ul-Hikam. Lawaih, Lamaiat, Lawami and other works of Sufism and expects that. "if this tract is examined by a man of God, he will justly remark what a (wonderful) gate of Divine inspiration has been opened to this fakir and that God has, inspite of his being in this garb (of a prince), opened to him the portals of saintliness and divine knowledge; so that human beings may know that His favour is without any (particular) He draws towards Himself whomsoever He likes, in whatever garb he be. This wealth (of Divine knowledge) is not bestowed on every one but has been bestowed specially on him." (p. 6). Dârā goes on speakin this strain. He says that his first work, Safina, was a composition of the period of quest (after a perfect divine) and his second, Sakīna. was written after he had reached the companionship of such a divine and had learnt from him "the paths of Sulūk and the Makāmāt (or the stages of the Sūfis)," (p. 7). Lastly, he says, "Now that the gates of Tawhid (Divine Unity) and 'Irfan (Divine knowledge) have been opened to him by God, the Most Holy and High, and He has bestowed on him His special gifts and bounties, he records them in this tract." (p. 7). Dārā further speaks (p. 5) that he has uniformly named a book by taking omens from the Holy Kur'an. He writes "In all my compositions I have followed the practice of taking omens from the Holy Kur'ān and naming them at the Divine instance. It had come to my mind to name this tract, Hak Numā, (or, the Compass of the Truth) and, when I took omen, the following Holy verse, which unmistakably points to this tract being a guide to truth and also to its greatness, came out":

¹ Lithographed at the Nawal Kishūr Press, Lucknow, 1910. It has also been t ranslated into English and published by the Panini Office, Allahabad.

And certainly We gave Moses the Book after We had destroyed the former generations, clear arguments for men and a guidance and a mercy that they may be mindful (Ch. xxviii: 43).

The tract is divided into six fasls (or, sections) dealing with the fou worlds of $N\bar{a}s\bar{u}t$, or, the Human World (pp. 8, 9); the $Malak\bar{u}t$, or, the Invisible World (p. 9-21); the $Jabar\bar{u}t$, or, the Highest Heaven (p. 21-22) and $L\bar{a}hut$, or the World of Divinity (p. 22). The fifth fasl deals with $Haw\bar{u}yat$ or Divine Essence and the sixth is a continuation of the same discussion. The author concludes the work by quoting one of his quatrains which shows that the tract was completed in 1056 A.H. and that it was written under inspiration:

"The whole of this tract is a compass of the Truth, and was completed in the year one thousand and fifty-six.

Consider this to be the work of Kādir (i.e. the Absolute) and no of Kādirī (i.e. Dārā Shikūh), Understand whatever I have said, and peace be on thee."

4. Shaikiyāt, or Hasanāt-ul-'Ārifīn, is a collection of Sūfic aphorism containing the ecstatic utterances of the mystics, which seemingly appear to be in direct contravention of the orthodox doctrines of Islām. The author says in the introduction that his mystic utterances and the expression of higher truths in moments of ecstasy gave rise to seriou objections from interested quarters. He writes ¹:

"As I had become dissatisfied with the current books of the med of the Path, and at times used to utter words containing the higher truth, in my ecstatic states, and some ill-natured and insincere people out of shallow knowledge, began to taunt and accuse me of heresies, struck me that I should collect sayings called Shatahat of high-sould and eminent men of sanctity as authorities for my professions, to convince those who are imbued with the spirit of Dajjāl instead of that of Christ or with that of Pharoah instead of that of Moses or with the of Abū Jahl instead of that of a Muhammad. Some sayings had been, no doubt, collected by one Bukli¹, but as they were in allegorical style, I have added more, and simplified the language so that it may be properly understood."

A perusal of the above extract will make it abundantly clear that Dārā had reached a very high stage of spiritual life and, if we take his statement to be correct, there is no gainsaying that he indulged in such ecstatic effusions as are the exclusive privilege of those alone who are spiritually perfect. He has boldly supported his aphorisms and utterances by writing this work, which not only embodies the ecstatic utterances of the various divines and mystics—such as Bayazid, Dhun Nūn al-Miṣrī, Sahl b. 'Abdullāh at-Tustarī, Abū Sa'īd Kharrāz, Junaid al-Baghdādī, Ruwaim, Abū Bakr Wāsiţī, Aḥmad-i-Ghazzālī, 'Abdul Kādir al-Jilānī, Ibn al-'Arabī and others-but also of Prophet Muhammad, the four Orthodox Caliphs and Imām Zain al-'Ābidīn and Imām Ja'far-i-Ṣādik. Dārā concludes by saying that some truth-seekers had asked him to embody in this work his own Shath, or aphorisms, but he replied by saying, "My Shath is that all the Shaths contained in this work are mine." This is certainly a very bold statement and may be said to do credit to the prince.

It appears from the introduction that $D\bar{a}r\bar{a}$ Shikūh undertook to write this work in 1062 A.H., when he was 28 years of age (p. 1),² and actually completed it on Monday, the last day of Rabī' al-Awwal, 1064 A.H., (p. 64). His conclusion is interesting as it gives us an insight into his mental attitude. He writes (p. 64): "He is fortunate who finds taste in these matters, and is benefited by them and considers himself a sincere devotee of theirs (i.e. the Ṣūfīs) and engages himself in such pursuits. God, the Generous, has said, 'We did not create the Jin and the human beings except for devotion.' All the erotic and esoteric commentators of the $Kur'\bar{a}n$ have explained devotion by the word 'Irjān (or, Divine knowledge). Hence, nothing is better than $Tawh\bar{n}d$ (monotheism) and Ma'rifat (Divine knowledge)....'

¹ The learned Pandit has wrongly read Baklī (رِيقَلِي) as Buklī. It is part of the name of Shaikh Rūzbahān Baklī, the well-known saint, whose life Dārā has noticed on p. 176 of his Sakīnat-ul-Awliyā (d. 606 A.H.).

- 5. Majma'-ul-Baḥrain, or 'the Mingling of the Two Oceans,' is the fifth work of Dārā Shikūh which he completed in 1065 A.H., namely, when he was forty-two years old. As I have discussed the work more fully in subsequent pages, (pp. xxx-xxxiii, infra.) I need not repeat what I have stated elsewhere.
- 6. Upanishads—This is a translation of some fifty chapters of the Upanishads, or Upanishat, entitled Sirr-i-Akbar, made by Dārā Shikūh, in 1067 A.H., or some two years before his execution.

The chief merit of this translation lies in its simplicity and it must always be considered as one of the best specimens of easy, flowing style. I cannot do better than present to the reader a translation of the introductory pages of this work, which will give him, I believe, an adequate idea as to the reasons which prompted Dārā to undertake this work; the pains that he took to read the Old and the New Testaments, the Psalms of David and other Scriptures; his disappointment at not finding in these scriptures a true solution of the problem of Tawhīd; and, finally, getting his heart's desire in the Upanishads.

He writes ²: "Praise be to the Self which has made the dot on the letter bi (-) of Bismillāh, (in the name of God), an eternal secret in all the revealed books; and Al-Hamd which is Omul-kitāb, in the Holy Kur'ān, is a reference to His Great Name (Ism-i-A'zam), in which are included all the angels, Heavenly Books, Prophets and Apostles. Preface: Now, thus sayeth this griefless faķīr, Muḥammad Dārā Shikūh, that when he visited the Paradise-like Kashmir, in 1050, he had, through Divine grace and His boundless mercy, occasion to become a disciple of Mullā Shāh As he had an ardent desire for seeing the God-knowing devotees of the various "yders" and hear their high utterances regarding monotheism, he had read the various works on mysticism and had himself composed tracts, but, inspite of this, his thirst for understanding Tawhīd, which is a vast ocean, was increasing more and more.

Anquetil Duperron, 'the famous French traveller and discoverer of the Zend Avesta,' translated the Upanishads into French (not published) and into Latin, from the Persian translation made by Dārā Shikūh. It was published in two volumes in 1891 and 1802. (See the Upanishads, translated by Max Müller in the Sucred Books of the East Series, Vol. I, p. lviii.)

[I. 13]

New problems were coming to his mind, the solution of which was impossible without a reference to the sayings of God or without (quoting) an authority from His Omniscient Self. Moreover, there were many secrets concealed in the Holy Kur'ān and the Sacred Book, whose interpreter it was difficult to find. So, he (i.e. the author) desired to read all the revealed Books, for the utterances of God elucidate and explain one another. It may be that in one place it is found in compendium, while in others it may be given in detail; and, as such, the compendium may be understood by the help of the detailed. I read the Old and the New Testaments and the Psalms of David and other scriptures but the discourse on Tawhīd found in them was brief and in a summary form and, from the easy translations which have been made by interested persons, the object could not be realized...."

Further, the author says that he examined the religious works of the Hindūs, "who do not negate monotheism," and found that the monotheistic verses contained in the four Vcdas have been collected and elucidated in the Upanikhat, which is an ocean of monotheism. So he undertook a literal and correct translation of the work with the help of the Pandits and the Sanyāsīs of Benares and accomplished the work in 1067 A.H. He says: "Any difficult problem or sublime idea that came to his mind and was not solved inspite of his best efforts, becomes clear and solved with the help of this ancient work, which is undoubtedly the first heavenly Book and the fountain-head of the ocean of monotheism, and, in accordance with or rather an elucidation of the Kur'ān. And this verse appears to have been revealed for this very ancient book:

It is ascertainable that the above verse does not refer to the Psalms, the Pentateuch and the Gospels, nor to the Secret Tablet ($Lawl_i$ -i- $Malf\bar{u}z$), as the word $tanz\bar{\imath}l$ cannot be applied to the latter. Now, as Upanikhat is a hidden secret .. and the actual verses of the $Kur'\bar{a}n$ can be found in it, it is certain that the hidden book (or, $kit\bar{a}b$ -i- $makn\bar{u}n$) is a reference to this very ancient book. This $Fak\bar{\imath}r$ has known unknown things and understood un-understood problems through the medium of this book. And (he) had no other object in view (in translating this work) except that he would be personally benefited or that his issues, friends and the seekers of the Truth would gather its fruits. The graced one who, having set aside the promptings of passion, and casting off all prejudice, will read and understand this translation,—which is entitled Sirr-i-Akbar (or, the Great Secret)—will consider it to be Divine utterance, he will have no anxiety or fear or grief and will be helped and fortified with Divine grace "

7. Bhāgvat Gītā.—The Persian translation of this well-known Sanskrit work is ascribed to Dārā Shikūh in the manuscript copy (No. 1949) preserved in the India Office Library. Dr. Ethé is of opinion that Dārā Shikūh and not Abul Faḍl, as wrongly asserted by Dr. Rieu, is the author of the work. In view of the categorical statement made by Dr. Ethé it is difficult to discredit his statement. The translation does not bear any date but most probably it was not made before 1067 A.H., namely, the year in which Dārā translated the Upanishads.

To the above list we may add the following works, which are, more or less, of a fragmentary character:—

- 8. I learn from the Makhzan-ul-Gharā'ib, an extremely valuable biography of Persian poets, that Dārā Shikūh had compiled a Bayāḍ, or Anthology, which was used by the author of Makhzan-ul-Gharā'ib in compiling his Tadhkira. It is unfortunate, however, that even a single copy of the Bayāḍ cannot be traced in any of the Oriental libraries. It is needless to add that had the Bayāḍ been available it must have thrown some light on the poetical taste of the prince and might also have enabled us to gather some more verses of the prince.
- 9. Dārā Shikūh is also the author of a large number of letters which are of no mean literary importance. The Fayyād-ul-Kawānīn 4

⁺ The Fayyūḍ-ul-Ķawūnīn is a valuable collection of a large number of letters divided into three books: "(i) Letters of kings and princes, (ii) Letters from nobles to each other and to kings and princes, and (iii) miscellaneous letters." (Sarkar's Aurangzib, ii, p. 315). Copies of this work are extremely rare but I was fortunate contains some eight letters written by the prince to $\underline{Sh}\bar{a}h$ Muḥammad Dilrubā, $\underline{Sh}aikh$ Muḥibbullāh of Allahabad and others, asking from them an explanation of certain abstruse points of Tasawwuf. I have also come across a number of letters, ascribed to him in certain books of $Insh\bar{a}$ and also in $Majm\bar{u}a's$, or the fragmentary collection of small tracts, etc.

10. In the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris, (No. 701 of Blochet's Catalogue), there is a MS. copy of Nigāristān-i-Munīr, which contains, at the end, the Introduction of a Muraķķa', (or, Album), which was, as the compiler's note indicates, dictated by Dārā Shikūh. It is not known as to whether the Album was arranged by the Prince himself or that it belonged to some one else who asked him to write the Introduction. It may also be possible that this introduction in Nigāristān is of the same Album which Dārā presented to his "nearest and dearest wife," Nādira Begam, in 1051 A.H. (=1641-2 A.D.).

Besides the above works, of which the first four have been printed and the last three are in manuscript, there are other works ascribed to the authorship of Dārā which have not been traced so far. However, if an attempt is made at their identification and the statements of the various authors, who have ascribed hitherto untraced works to Dārā, are verified in the light of modern research it will, I hope, shed more light on the life and works of this prince. I append, herewith, a list of such works as are said to have been written by Dārā but have not, so far as I know, been traced in any of the important libraries of the East or the West:—

1. $Ris\bar{a}la$ -i-Ma' $\bar{a}rif$.—This is said to be a tract on, as its name indicates, the doctrines of mysticism. The author of $\underline{Khaz\bar{i}nat}$ -ul- $Asfiy\bar{a}^1$ (vol. I, p. 175) ascribes its authorship to $D\bar{a}r\bar{a}$ $\underline{Sh}ik\bar{u}h$. Muḥammad Laṭīf, in his $Lahore^2$, has also included it in the list of $D\bar{a}r\bar{a}$ $\underline{Sh}ik\bar{u}h$'s works but the latter appears to have only copied it from the $\underline{Khaz\bar{i}na}$.

in examining a MS. copy of the above work. I have taken down a transcription of the letters of Dārā Shikūh which I propose to publish sometime later. Two of the above letters are included in a MS. copy of Safīna-i-Baḥr-ul-Muḥīṭ, preserved in the Berlin Library (Pertsch, pp. 40, 45). Another letter which Dārā Shikūh wrote in 1055 A.H. (=1645 A.D.) is preserved in MS. No. 56 of the above library (Pertsch, p. 115) and a letter to Sarmad was published in the Indian Antiquary, 1923.

- 2. $N\bar{a}dir\text{-}un\text{-}Nik\bar{a}t$.—Dr. Ethé ¹ has ascribed this work to Dārā Shikūh but has quoted no authority in favour of his assertion. It is not improbable, however, that $N\bar{a}dir\text{-}un\text{-}Nik\bar{a}t$ is only another name of $Ris\bar{a}la\text{-}i\text{-}Hak$ $Num\bar{a}$, for a manuscript copy of the latter tract (in the A.S.B. Curzon Collection) bears the former title. It is equally probable that $N\bar{a}dir\text{-}un\text{-}Nik\bar{a}t$ and $Muk\bar{a}lima\text{-}i\text{-}B\bar{a}b\bar{a}$ $L\bar{a}l$ wa $D\bar{a}r\bar{a}$ $Shik\bar{u}h^2$ (of which I will speak later) are identical, for a manuscript copy of the latter work preserved in the O.P. Library ³ bears the title of $Makhzan\text{-}i\text{-}Nik\bar{a}t$, which is closely allied to $N\bar{a}dir\text{-}un\text{-}Nik\bar{a}t$. It is, however, difficult to choose between the two probables.
- 3. Mathnawi.—It appears from the Journal of the Punjab Historical Society (vol. II, No. I)⁴ that a Persian Mathnawi said to have been composed by this prince, is mentioned in the Makhzan, a monthly magazine of Lahore (September, 1907).
- 4. It is stated in the above Journal that Dārā Shikūh is reported to have written an autobiography, but, so far, I have found no mention of such a work in the books I have consulted in connection with the life of this prince.

DĀRĀ SHIKŪH AS A POET.

So far, we have described only the prose-works of Dārā Shikūh or such other works as have been ascribed to his authorship but have not, as far as I know, been traced anywhere. Now we may discuss briefly the merits of Dārā as a poet. But, I must state at the outset, that the materials for such a discussion are very scanty. We know from authoritative sources that Dārā Shikūh composed a Dīwān, entitled Iksīr-i-A'zam, which, according to the author of Khazīnat-ul-Aṣfiyā, contained "a mine of information regarding Tawhīd," and was actually perused by him. It is a pity, however, that such a valuable Dīwān has not, as yet, found room in the well-known libraries of the East or the West, nor has seen the light of print. I was pleased to see an announcement in the Nigār, (an Urdū monthly of Bhūpāl), that the Dīwān of

Dārā Shikūh has been discovered and that full particulars regarding this valuable manuscript will be published in a subsequent issue of the magazine. I waited for two years but no such description of the manuscript appeared. Finally, I wrote to the editor of the magazine who informed me, in reply, that the owner of the manuscript had left for England and I must wait till his return. Hence, my disappointment. I also found an announcement in the price-list of Hājī Jān Muḥ. Allāh Bakhsh Ganā'ī, the well-known book-sellers of Lahore, that the Quatrains of Dārā Shikūh (باعيات داراشكوة) are in the course of print. It is more than two years since I saw the announcement and I have been asked by the publishers to wait for some months more!

It is difficult to hazard any opinion regarding the contents of the $Diw\bar{a}n$, nor it is possible to say whether the Quatrains, which are said to be in the course of publication at Lahore, are included in the $Diw\bar{a}n$, or the Mathnawi, which has been ascribed to him, is also included in it. Such questions can only be answered on the publication of the $Diw\bar{a}n$ or a list of its contents. For the time being, at least, we are to be contented with some 25 quatrains and a few Ghazals only, which have either been quoted by $D\bar{a}r\bar{a}$ in his prose-works or have been, ascribed to him in the various Tadhkiras.

The largest number of Quatrains, totalling more than 20 ¹, are quoted by Dārā in his Ḥasanāt-ul-ʿĀrifīn and only a few more can be found in all his remaining works. Hence, it is apparent that the materials, as I have stated before, are very scanty. But we are to judge their value by their quality and not by their quantity. We find, that Dārā's verses were appreciated in his own life-time. The following appreciation from the pen of Mullā Shāh, who was himself an accomplished poet, will serve to convey an idea as to Dārā being a poet of no ordinary merit: ²

"All the excellences are under the subjugation of an $\bar{A}rif$, and this is well-established that he (also) possesses (some degree) of harmonious-ness. What to say of your incomparable and heart-pleasing verses. How sweet fruits cannot be borne by this pure clay?"

We learn from the Tadhkiras that Dārā had adopted the Takhallus, or nom de plume, of Kādirī, which testifies to his sincere devotion to the Kādirī order. Sarkhush, who wrote his Kalimāt-ush-Shu'arā only twenty-one years after the execution of Dārā, speaks of him in the following words 1:—

"Muḥammad Dārā Shikūh styled as "Shāh-i-Baland Iķbāl," the heir-apparent of Shāhjahān Pādshāh, was a prince of good disposition, fine imagination and handsome appearance. He had patience; led the life of a Ṣūfī, was a friend of the devotees, and was also an Unitarian and a philosopher. He had a noble mind and a far-reaching intelligence. He expressed Ṣūfistic ideas in Quatrains and Ghazals and, in view of his adherence to the Kādirī order, adopted the penname of Kādirī."

Then, the author proceeds to narrate a story showing Dārā's forbearance towards one of the buffoons of his court who had made a very impertinent joke at the expense of the prince.

The author concludes the notice of Dārā with the following remarks:—

"He has written excellent Sūfistic works and has solved difficult problems therein. A small $D\bar{\imath}w\bar{\imath}n$ of his verses has been collected."

The same author, while giving an account of Mīrzā Radī, Dāniṣh, who came to India in the reign of Shāhjahān, writes:—

"Dārā Shikūh, having appreciated this verse 2 of his, selected it as Misra'-i-Tarah:

Every one composed verses according to his liking. The prince also wrote a verse: 3

"Kingship is easy; make thyself familiar with the ways of asceticism,

(For), if a drop can be the ocean why should it (then) be the pearl."

I cannot do better than quote some of his verses, from certain $Tad\underline{h}kiras$, and leave them to the readers to pass their own judgment on the same; but, I would ask them to keep in mind the fact that the verses were written at a time when the grandeur and magnificence of the Mughal court had reached the highest pitch of perfection and, in the midst of that mirth and merry-making, there was the heir-apparent who did think of the Transcendent and rise above the gross materialism of his day to the planes of higher spiritualism. He writes:

هر خم و پیچی که شد از تاب زلفِ یار شد دام شد تسبیح شد زنجیر شد زقار شد

تا دوست رسیدیم چو از خویش بریدیم از خویش گذشتن چه مبارک سفری بود

including the prince, had written verses in reply (=) to the above verse of $Faid\bar{i}$. I think, the biographer is wrong in ascribing the authorship of the verse to $Faid\bar{i}$ as it is not included in his $D\bar{i}w\bar{a}n$.

DARA SHIKUH AND THE FINE ARTS.

Dārā Shikūh was a lover of the fine arts. He studied Caligraphy with Āṣā 'Abdur Rashīd ad-Dailamī, the well-known Caligrapher at the court of Shāhjahān and the last great scribe of Nasta'līķ. The author of Tadhkira-i-Khushnawīsān¹ states that Dārā wrote a very good hand in Nasta'līķ and was the best pupil of Āṣā Rashīd. He adds that none of the pupils of the Āṣā excelled him in fine penmanship. It may be added that there is a painting in the collection of Mr. A. Ghose of Calcutta in which Dārā Shikūh is depicted as taking his lessons in Caligraphy from the Āṣā.² Besides Nasta'līķ, Dāra also wrote a very good hand in Naskh, and the specimens of his Caligraphy preserved in the various Oriental Libraries prove conclusively that he excelled both in Naskh and Nasta'līķ.³ He was also a great admirer of paint-

Khān Bahādur 'Abdul Muktadir (Catalogue of Persian MSS. in the Oriental Public Library, Patna, Vol. VIII, pp. 47, 48) is of opinion that the MS. has been collated by Dārā Shikūh, as the marginal notes indicate, and not copied by him, as is generally asserted.

Shams-ul-'ulamā Hāfiz Nadhīr Ahmad, who examined the MS. in the 'Azīz Bāgh Library, Hyderabad (Deccan), gives the following account of the MS. in the Journal and Proceedings of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, (New Series, 1917, p. xc.): "The verses of the Kur'ān are written throughout in gold. The headings are illuminated with fine floral designs and the copy is beautifully illuminated throughout. The MS. is carefully preserved in a splendid binding."

"This album was presented to his nearest and dearest friend, the Lady Nadira Begum by Prince Muhammad Dārā Shukoh, son of the Emperor Shahjahān in the year 1051 (1641-2 A.D.)"², is one of the most valuable treasures of the Mughal Art.

Principal Percy Brown in his admirable Indian Painting under the Mughals, while discussing the value and importance of the Album, observes:—

"As a criterion of the artistic taste of a cultivated Mughal prince this Muraqqa" is of interest; it shows that its original owner, while attracted by weak prettiness in some of his selections, was on the whole a good judge of a miniature and had gathered his examples with care."

And, Cecil L. Burns, describing the Album in an illuminating article in the Times of India Annual, 1925, writes:—

It may be added, here, that an ornamented and illuminated copy of the Kur'ān which, it is believed, was actually used by Dārā Shikūh, is now in the collection of Nawwāb Ḥusāmuddīn Ḥaidar of Comilla.

The author of Safar Nāma-i-Mazharī (late Ḥājī Mazhar 'Alīm Anṣārī Rūdawlawī) gives us the following particulars regarding the copy:— 'Nawwāb Ḥusām Ḥaidar Ṣāḥib showed me a MS. copy of the Kur'ān which was illuminated and ornamented with gold. It is written by a Persian scribe on thick, fine paper. The size is folio. My eyes were brightened on seeing the MS. It was this very Kur'ān from which Dārā Shikūh read daily. It bears his seal. The Nawwāb Ṣāḥib got the MS. from a European lady. It is a unique copy of the Kur'ān, (p. 98 of the Safar Nāma).

WORKS WRITTEN AT THE INSTANCE OF DARA.

In addition to the works which are Dārā's own composition, there is a large number of books which have either been written at his instance, or have been dedicated to him as a tribute to his patronage of such authors. The number of the works of former class cannot be expected to be large but the works of the latter class are numerous and, as such, it will not be possible to notice all of them. Moreover, the identification of all such books has not been complete. I will, therefore, enumerate only the more important ones of this class.

Now, let us discuss the works of the former class:-

(1) Mukālima-i-Dārā Shikāh wa Bābā Lāl—contains a summary of the questions that were asked by Dārā Shikāh on the various topics of Hindā religion and ascetic life and the replies that were given to them by Bābā Lāl, a Hindā devotee of the Panjāb. It appears, from the investigations made by Pandit Sheo Narain,¹ that Bābā Lāl, actually named Lāl Dayāl, was a Khatrī of Ķaṣūr, who lived at his Ashān, at Dhiānpūr near Batāla. Dārā Shikāh intended to go to him, as he was a friend of Miyān Jīv, but the saint himself came down to Lahore, where Dārā conversed with him.² It is, however, difficult to fix the actual date of these conversations; for there is no internal evidence, except one perhaps, to give us a clue to ascertain this point. From the seventh and the last sitting it can be ascertained that these conversations took place after Dārā's return from the expedition to Ķandhār, in 1062 A.H.

In his $\underline{\mathcal{H}}$ as $an\overline{a}t$ -ul- $\overline{\mathcal{A}}$ rifin, which he completed in 1064 A.H., $D\overline{a}r\overline{a}$ has included the name of $B\overline{a}b\overline{a}$ L $\overline{a}l$ —the only Hind \overline{u} whose aphorisms he has quoted. He writes (p, 40):

² Paudit Sheo Narain writes that he has found a manuscript copy of Bābā Lāl's biography, from which he has taken the above details.

"Bābā Lāl Mandiya is one of the perfect ' $\overline{A}ri/s$, and I have seen none in the Hindū community who is equal to him in majesty and firmness. He told me, 'There are ' $\overline{A}ri/s$ and perfect (divines) in every community through whose grace God grants salvation to that community'....'

In the Majma'-ul-Baḥrain also, (p. 24), Dārā has put down the name of this saint, whom he calls Bābā Lāl Bairāgī, by the side of those Muḥammadan saints and divines who have been the best representatives of the Ṣūſī order in Islām. The inclusion of the name of a Hindū in such an exclusive list of Muslim divines shows unmistakably the high esteem in which this devotee was held by Dārā Shikūh.

Hence, it is not surprising that Dārā did invite the saint and had the conversations, which passed between him and the mystic, recorded. It appears that Dārā's private Secretary, Chandar Bhān,² was present on the occasion of these interviews and perhaps, acting as an interpreter took a verbatim report of the whole dialogue, from which he prepared the present book, entitled Mukālima-i-Dārā Shikūh wa Bābā Lāl.

In the A.S.B. (Curzon Collection 1908-1910) there is a manuscript copy of $P\bar{u}th\bar{i}\ \bar{U}r\bar{i}s\bar{i}$ in Persian, which contains the memoirs of $B\bar{a}b\bar{a}$ L \bar{i} l and also an account of the interview which he had with $D\bar{a}r\bar{a}$ Shik \bar{u} h in 1059 A.H. (= 1649 A.D.)

It may be added here, that there is a painting reproduced in Binyon's The Court Painters of the Grand Moghals, in which Dāra Shikūh is depicted as sitting by the side of Bābā Lāl. Binyon gives us the following particulars regarding the Bābā:—

"Lāl Swāmī....was a Kshatriya, born in Malwa in the reign of Jahāngīr; after having been initiated, he settled near Sirhind, in the Panjāb, where he built himself a hermitage, together with a temple, and was visited by a large number of disciples. Among those who were attracted by his teaching was Dārā Shikoh; two learned Hindus who were in this prince's service have recorded, in a work entitled $N\bar{a}dir-al-Nik\bar{a}t$, the conversation, that took place between the Swami and the prince during seven interviews between them in the year 1649.1"

² Chandar Bhān was an inhabitant of Patyālā or of Lahore, as asserted by some. He was the Mīr Munghī to Dārā and was appointed in the Dār-ul-Inghā of Shāhjahān, in 1066 A.H., and entitled Rāi Chandar Bhān. He died in 1068 A.H., or in 1073. He left several works including Chahār Chaman, Munghiāt-i-Brahman, Kārnāma, Guldasta, Majma*-ul-Wuzarā, etc., and a Dīwān.

In another painting.² reproduced in the above book, the Bābā appears in a group of some twelve Indian Divines to wit, Rāy Dās, Pīpā. Nāmdīv, Sā'īn. Kamāl. Awghar, Kabīr, Pīr Machandar, Gorakh Jadrū, (?) Pīr Panth Swāmī (?), and is styled there as Lāl Swāmī. A painting was also exhibited at the second meeting of the Indian Historical Records Commission ³ in which Dārā Shikūh and Bābā Lāl (called there Lāldās) are shown in each other's company.

And an un-identified painting in Percy Brown's Indian Painting under the Mughals (Plate No. XLVI from M. Demotte's collection), also portrays, in my opinion, the meeting scene between Dārā Shikūh and Bābā Lāl Dās.⁴

(2) Jug Bāshist—or a Persian translation of the famous Sanskrit, Yoga Vāsishtha, was undertaken at the instance of Dārā Shikūh by one of his courtiers, whose name, unfortunately, we do not know. The translator says in the introduction that Prince Dārā Shikūh ordered him, in 1066 A.H., to translate the Yoga Vāsishtha into simple Persian, for the other translations, and more specially, the one made by Mullā Ṣūfī, did not serve the purpose of the seekers of the truth. The immediate reason, however, of having the book translated was that

⁴ The dialogues have been arranged and edited by one Chiranjī Lāl and lithographed at Delhi in 1885. An Urdū translation, entitled Asrār-i-Ma'rifat, has also been published, some years back, by Dīwān Māyā Dās of Lahore and another, with the Persian text, and entitled Shu'ā-i-Ma'rifat was published by Munghī Bulāķī Dās of Delhi in 1896. I have perused the second lithographed copy and am surprised to find that it differs materially from the manuscript copy preserved in the Oriental Public Library, Patna, (No. 1449 of the Hand-list of Persian MSS.). Further, a perusal of the above MS. copy reveals the fact that the work was originally composed in Hindī and then translated into Persian (fol. la). It may be added, here, that MS. copies of the Mukālima in the Berlin Library, (Pertsch, No. 1,081,2) and the Bodleian Library (Ethé, Column 758) agree, as appears from the first line quoted in the catalogues, with the copy in the Oriental Public Library, Patna. Since the above was in type, an excellent text of the Mukālima, with its French translation, has been published by Huart and Massignon in the Journal Asiatique, Paris, Tome CCIX, No. 2.

⁵ In A.S.B. Collection MS. No. 158, the name of the translator is Shaikh Sūfī.

both Vāsistha and Rām Chandar appeared, one night, before Dārā Shikūh in dream; the former asking Rām Chandar to embrace Dārā Shikūh which he did and then again asking him, (Rām Ch.) to give some sweets to Dārā, which he took and ate. As a result of this dream it came to the mind of Dārā to have the work translated into Persian. He commanded one of his courtiers to do the work which he performed in collaboration with certain well-known Pandits of the place.

(3) Tārikh-i-Shamshīr Khānī—an abridgement of the Shāhnāma made at the instance of Dārā. (See Proceedings of the Indian Historical Records Commission, Vol. II, p. xvii, and Pertsch, No. 708).

Of the works dedicated to Dārā I append, hereto, a list of only two:

- (1) Tibb-i-Dārā Shikūhī —is a big work of some 400 folios on "the general principles of medicine and the treatment of the various diseases" which was written by Nūruddīn Muḥammad b. 'Abdullāh b. 'Ainul-Mulk Shīrāzī. It was written about the year 1056 A.H.² and dedicated to Dārā Shikūh, the then heir-apparent of Shāhjahān.
- (2) Tarjuma-i-Akwāl-i-Wāsiṭī—or a Persian translation of the sayings of the famous Sūfī, Abū Bakr b. Muḥammad b. Mūsā al-Wāsiṭī (d. C. 320 A.H., 932 A.D.), by one Ibrāhīm Miskīn who dedicated them to this prince in 1067, that is, only two years before his execution.³

DARA'S RELIGIOUS VIEWS.

A close examination of the works of Dārā Shikūh, in their correct chronological order, will reveal the fact that his earlier studies were purely Sūfistic in character and were not extended to an examination of the mystic systems of other religions. But the deeper and wider was his study the greater was the realization of the truths found in other religions and more outspoken the appreciation for them. There is no denying the fact that he must have received his education on old, orthodox lines but, nevertheless, he had the courage to cast away all prejudice and examine things in their true perspective. He writes himself in his introduction to the translation of the Upanishads that after his discipleship of Mulla Shah, in 1050 A.H., he came in close contact with the divines of the various religious and perused the Psalms, the Gospels and the Penta-This marks the beginning of Dārā's examination of the systems of various religions. But in the books and tracts which he wrotebefore 1062, he does not express his opinion on the various religions, or, more specially, on Hinduism. In the Shathiyat only (1062) we find him quoting the aphorisms of a Hindū divine, Bābā Lāl, which purports to declare that 'Truth is not the monopoly of any one religion.' The next work, in order of chronology, is the Majma'-ul-Bahrain, written in 1065, in which he has expressed his views very clearly, and is definitely of opinion that in the higher planes of the realization of Truth there is no essential difference between Hinduism and Islam. Dārā knew that such an outspoken expression of opinion must be considered as sacrilegious by a large section of the members of both the communities, so he gives the note of warning and says, "I have written this book for the members of my family and have nothing to do with the common ones of both the religions." This small book is an attempt toreconcile Hinduism and Islam. The author has endeavoured to show that the conception of the Elements, God, the Senses, the Almighty, the Soul, the Communion with the Infinite, the Day of Resurrection, the Universe, the Planets and the Cycles, etc., is practically the same in Hindūism and Islām. His attempt has been mostly confined to showing the points of identity between the two religions without exalting or undermining either. He is concerned with facts and puts them as they are. His is rather a comparative study of Hinduism and Islam with an attempt to point out the various points on which they meet. As a student of comparative religion he has put down the points of resemblance between the two religions, however superficial they may be, and, surprisingly enough, in his zeal for establishing a close identity between them, has chosen to ignore the many points of difference. But it must be admitted, at the same time, that Dārā had not renounced his own faith and become a Hindu as is asserted by a biased section of the community. The very Introduction, which he has begun with the praise of God, the Prophet, his companions and the descendants, will belie such a presumption, and a careful perusal of the later chapters will show that he was a Muslim throughout, believing in the saints and the mystics of Islām and calling Muhammed the 'last Prophet.'

² The author writes in the introduction that he composed the work about the time Shāhjahān conquered Badakhshān, namely 1055-56 A.H.

From 1065 A.H. onwards, Dārā was more deeply interested in the study of Hindūism. In 1066 A.H., he got the Jug Bāshist translated into Persian. A year later he himself translated the Upanishads into Persian prose. About this time he also translated the Bhāgvat Gītā 1 or, perhaps, had it translated by one of his courtiers.

In all these works there is not the slightest indication that Dārā had renounced Islām and embraced Hindūism. He is a Muslim throughout. He is of opinion that the Vedas are "revealed books" but certainly this could not amount to an apostasy from Islām. He believed in the Kur'an and was of opinion that "the Vedas were in accordance with the Kur'an or rather they were an interpretation of that." Can such an opinion amount to renouncing Islam? It is for the doctors of the Faith to pronounce an opinion on the point but, to a layman like myself, it appears that no one could possibly be declared a $K\bar{a}fir$ on one's simply expressing the above views. There have been many revealed books, which according to the Muslim faith have been abrogated, but, nevertheless, they can be studied profitably by one who wishes to make a higher and deeper study of religions and theological problems. So, if Dārā found in the Vedas an elucidation and explanation of certain abstruse problems of the Kur'an, he cannot be condemned. Mirzā Jānjānān Mazhar, Shahīd (d. 1130=1717 A.D.), who was a very well-known saint of India has expressed practically the same views but he has not been condemned by any. He writes2: It appears from the ancient books of the Indians that the Divine Mercy, in the beginning of the creation of the human species, sent a Book, named the Bed (Veda), which is in four parts, in order to regulate the duties of this as well as the next world All the schools (of the Hindus) unanimously believe in the unity of the most high God; consider the world to be created; believe in the destruction of the world, in the reward for good and bad conduct; on the resurrection and accountability (of conduct) The rules and regulations of their faith are fully and well arranged. So it is evident that it had been a good religion but abrogated. In Islamic Shar no mention of any other abrogated religions, save Judaism and Christianity, is made; whereas many other religions have undergone the process of obliteration and affirmation (i.e. changes).

If the above views cannot amount to an apostasy from Islām, it is difficult to understand how Dārā Shikūh could have been condemned for expressing practically the same views.

His works and writings are before us and, on examining them, we can only state that he was a Muslim throughout and, being a Sūfī himself, expressed such views, which, though appearing as revolting at first sight, cannot have amounted to an apostasy from Islām. What to say of Dārā? If one cares to examine the works and writings of the most eminent Sufis one will find that their aphorisms and paradoxes are more condemnable than those of Dārā Shikuh. that Mansur was crucified, Shihābuddīn Suhrawardī executed and Sarmad put to death, but time has vindicated their Today, they are hailed as martyrs and sufferers on the Path; and such is the case with Dārā. Time has vindicated his honour and, now, he is adored and admired by a large section of the Muslims as a prince who suffered death, not as an offender against Islām, but as one who fell a victim to the Imperialistic ambitions and aspirations of his wily, fakir brother.

But yet we find that Dārā Shikūh was indicted by the ecclesiasts of the court of Aurangzīb for his apostasy. According to Maāthir-i-'Ālamgīrī, the official history of Aurangzīb, the charge against him was that "The pillars of the Canonical Law and Faith apprehended many kinds of disturbances from his life. So the Emperor, both out of necessity to protect the Holy Law, and also for reasons of State, considered it unlawful to allow Dārā to remain alive any longer as a destroyer of the public peace." But the above indictment is too meagre to need any comment. Anyone can choose to be the Champion of Islām and remove all those who stand in the way of the realization of his political ambitions.

Majma'-ul-Baḥrain.

This small tract is of supreme importance to a student of comparative religion as it embodies, so far as I know, the first and perhaps the last attempt of its kind to reconcile the two apparently divergent religions. It is the last original work of Dārā Shikūh and, as such, has an importance of its own. And, according to one authority,² it was this very work which brought about his death. It is said that this tract was laid before the ecclesiasts who declared its author a heretic and sentenced him to death, which was only too faithfully carried out by his over-zealous brother.

An examination of the concluding portion of the work will show that it was written in 1065 A.H., that is, when Dārā was 42. It appears from the Introduction that Dārā wrote this work, "according to his own inspiration and taste, for the members of his family:" He declares openly, "I have nothing to do with the common folk of both the communities."

The tract begins with an Introduction and contains twenty sections having the following headings:—

- 1. The Elements.
- 2. The Senses.
- 3. The Religious Exercises.
- 4. The Attributes.
- 5. The Wind.
- 6. The Four Worlds.
- 7. The Fire.

It is unfortunate that, although the MSS of Majma'-ul-Bahrain are not rare in the libraries in India, they are full of clerical mistakes and also contain innumerable errors both of omission and commission. I have consulted five MSS, in preparing the present text, but to my great disappointment none of them could satisfy me. There are so many variants and the Persian transliteration of Sanskrit terms or quotations from the $Kur'\bar{a}n$ are so very different that the task of the editor becomes extremely difficult and, at times, even insurmountable.

The MSS, that I have used in preparing my text are:-

- (1) MS. from the Āṣifiya Library, Hyderabad, dated 9th Rabī. I, 1224 A.H., transcribed by Sayyid Gharīb 'Alī b. Sayyid Shāh 'Alī Rizā. The Librarian, Mawlawī 'Abbās Ḥusain Kantūrī was good enough to have it copied under his supervision. The MS. contains innumerable clerical mistakes. I have named this MS. H.
- (2) A MS. from the (Khudā Bakhsh Khān) Oriental Public Library, Bankipore (No. 1450 of the Hand-list of Persian MSS. prepared by Khān Bahādur 'Abdul Muktadir), bearing no date of transcription nor the name of the scribe. It is a relatively better MS. than H, but, nevertheless, contains several orthographical mistakes and is not written in a clear hand. I have collated MS. H with the Oriental Public Library MS. which I name K.
- (3) A MS. from the Rāmpūr State Library, dated 22nd Dhul Hijja, 1226 A.H., copied by Muḥammad Hājī Beg at the instance of Khwāja Mīr Kāsim. The MS. is imperfect in several ways. There are apparently spurious additions in the text which display Shūte tendencies. A perusal of the list of variants will confirm this statement.

I have got a transcription of the above MS. through Shams-ul-'ulamā M. Hidāyat Ḥusain, who, in his turn, got it, as he informs me, through the kindness of Ḥāfiẓ Aḥmad 'Alī Khān, the Librarian of the Nawwāb's Palace Library. I have named this MS. R.

- (4) A MS. from the Victoria Memorial Hall, Calcutta, which is displayed in the shelves of the Hall, as an autograph of Dārā Shikūh. I examined the MS. carefully and found that there was no internal or external evidence to prove or even suggest that the MS. was an autograph one. The handwriting is not that of Dārā Shikūh, for it is quite different from the known autographs of the prince Moreover, there are so many omissions, inaccuracies and even mistakes of spelling that it is impossible for one to believe that it is an autograph copy of Dārā Shikūh. I have named the MS. V.
- (5) MS. from the Asiatic Society of Bengal (Curzon Collection, No. 156, III, of the MS. Hand-list), which has been acquired quite recently. As the Text and Translation were already in type, I could use the MS. very sparingly. I have, however, made full use of it in preparing the list of variants. I may add here that had this MS. been available at the time of preparing my Text it would have helped me a great deal in preparing a relatively better text. I would call this MS. A.

Resides the above MSS., I have sometimes consulted the apparently unique MS. of the Arabic translation of Majma'-ul-Baḥrain which is preserved in the Būhār Library, (Imperial Library, Calcutta.) ¹. This translation was made by one Muḥammad Ṣāliḥ b. ash-Shaikh Aḥmad al-Miṣrī, and was of much use to me in correcting the Arabic quotations, etc.

An Urdū translation of Majma'-ul-Bahrain, entitled $N\bar{u}r$ -i-'Ain, by one Gocul Prasād, was lithographed at Lucknow (1872), but, unfortunately, I could not secure a copy of that.

The above description of the M88, of Majma'-ul-Bajrain will make it abundantly clear that none of them by itself could possibly have been used as the basis of a good text. So, I had no other alternative than to prepare my text by collating all the M88, and selecting the best reading for my text. I admit that all my selections may not be approved of by my readers and they may permit of further improvement, but, with the texts that I had, I fear I could not do better

I may add here that in preparing the list of variants I have kept in view the fact that only such variations of the text should be noted as are material and cannot possibly be ascribed to a mistake on the part of the copyist. But in order to give the reader an idea of the large number of variations. I have noted down almost all the variations found on page 5 of the printed text, which, I think, will bear a striking testimony to the idio-yneracies of the copyists.

A very difficult task which confronted me was that of identification and transliteration of Sunskrit terms which had been so mutilated in the Persian text that in many cases it became almost impossible to identify them correctly. I explained my difficulty to my friend and colleague, Dr. Surendra Nath Das-Gupta, the author of the admirable History of Indian Philosophy, who was good enough to go through the first few pages of my English translation. On examining my MS, translation the learned doctor suggested to me that Dara Shikuh had made several inaccurate statements in his text and it was desirable that footnotes were added, explaining and correcting such statements. promised to write the foot-notes himself, but, on account of his departure for America, he was unable to fulfil his promise. I am greatly indebted to Professor Nilmoni Chakravarti, M.A., my colleague at the Presidency College, who has very kindly identified and transliterated the Sanskrit terms. He has always helped me ungrudgingly.

I cannot conclude, without thanking Shams-ul-'ulamā Dr. M. Hidāyat Ḥusain, my teacher and colleague, who has helped me throughout and has always been willing to lay at my disposal his vast store of knowledge regarding Islāmie bibliography and Kur'ānic literature. I am also indebted to Khān Ṣāḥib 'Abdul Walt (who is, unfortunately, no longer alive) and Mawlawt Sayyid Muḥammad Ṭāhir, M.A., for their kind assistance.

My thanks are also due to Mr. A. H. Harley, M.A., Principal

Finally, I thank Mr. Johan van Manen, F.A.S.B., the Secretary of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, for his many valuable suggestions and for securing me the permission of the Society for the publication of this work in the Bibliotheca Indica Series.

TRANSLATION.

"In the name of One who hath no name. With whatever name then callest Him, He uplifteth His Head."

Abundant praise be (showered) on the Incomparable One, who has manifested on His beautiful, unparalleled and matchless face the two parallel locks of Faith $(Im\bar{a}n)$ and Infidelity (Kufr), and by neither of them has He covered His beautiful face.

"Faith and Infidelity, both are galloping on the way towards. Him.

And are exclaiming (together): He is One and none shares His kingship."?

He is manifest in all; and everything has emanated from Him. He is the first and the last and nothing exists, except Him.

Quatrain:

"The neighbour, the companion and the co-traveller is He, In the rags of beggars and the raiments of kings, is He, In the conclave on high and the secret chamber below, By God, He is all and, verily by God, He is all." ⁵

I This verse is quoted from the Hadilint-ul-Halikat of Hakim Sanā'i Charnawi. Dara Shikūh also has written a quatram which bears a close affinity in meaning to the above verse of Sanā'i.

[&]quot;We have not seen a single particle of dust separate from the sun,

⁽And) every drop of water is the sea in itself.

With what name one should call the Truth?

⁽For) whatever name there is, it is one of the names of God.

Jāmī also has a similar quatrain:

[&]quot; At times we call Thee wine and next the wine-cup,

⁽And) at times we call Thee grain and then a snare:

There is nothing except Thy name on the tablet of the earth

Now, with what name should we call Thee?

² It appears from the Darbūr-i-Akbarī of Mawlawī Muḥammad Ḥusain Āzūd (p. 492) that Abul Fadl had this verse inscribed on a building which Akbar had built for the common use of the Hindūs and the Musalmūns.

³ This is one of the quatrains of Jāmī. Dārā also quotes it in his Ḥasanāt. ul. Ārifin in connection with the Shathiyāt of the poet.

And unlimited benedictions be upon the complete manifestation, the cause of the creation of the universe-Muhammad, may peace be on him and his exalted descendants and great companions. Now, thus sayeth this unafflicted, unsorrowing fakir, Muhammad Dārā Shikuh, that, after knowing the Truth of truths and ascertaining the secrets and subtleties of the true religion of the Sūfīs and having been endowed with this great gift (i.e., Sufistic inspiration), he thirsted to know the tenets of the religion of the Indian monotheists; and, having had repeated intercourse and (continuous) discussion with the doctors and perfect divines of this (i.e. Indian) religion who had attained the highest pitch of perfection in religious exercises, comprehension (of God), intelligence and (religious) insight, he did not find any difference, except verbal, in the way in which they sought and comprehended Truth. Consequently, having collected the views of the two parties and having brought together the points—a knowledge of which is absolutely essential and useful for the seekers of Truth-he (i.e. the author) has compiled a tract and entitled it Majma'-ul-Bahrain or "The Mingling of the Two Oceans," as it is a collection of the truth and wisdom of two Truth-knowing (Hak Shinās) groups. The great (mystics) have said: "Taṣawwuf is equity and (further) Tasawwuf is the abandonment of (religious) obliga-So, one who is just and discerning will at once understand that in ascertaining these points how deeply I had to think. It is certain that discerning, intelligent persons will derive much pleasure from this tract (Risāla), while persons of blunt intelligence, of either side, will get no share of its benefits. I have put down these researches of mine, according to my own intuition and taste, for the benefit of the members of my family and I have no concern with the common folk of either community. As, Khwāja Ahrār, 1 may his secrets be sanctified, has said, "If I know that an infidel, immersed in sin, is, in a way, singing the note of Monotheism, I go to him, hear him and am grateful to him."

And from God comes grace and help!

¹ Khwāja Nāṣiruddīn 'Ubaidullāh, better known as Khwāja Aḥrār, was a great Naḥāhbandī mystic. He was born in 806 A.H. and lived for the greater part of his life at Samarkand where he died on the 29th Rabī' I, 895 A.H. 'Alī b. Ḥusain al-Wā'iz al-Kāṣhifī in his Raṣhaḥāt deals, principally, with the life and teachings of the Khwāja. (See Nafaḥāt-ul-Uns, Nawal Kiṣhūr edition, p. 364.) Dārā Shikūh quotes the above saying, attributed to Khwāja Aḥrār, on p. 39 of his Ḥaṣanāt-ul-'Ārifīn.

DISCOURSE ON THE ELEMENTS ('Anasir').

Know that the elements are five in number and that these five alone form the constituents of all the mundane creations-First, "the great element", ('Unsur-i-A'zam), which the men of Faith (Shar') call "'Arsh-i-Akbar", or, the "great throne"; Secondly, the wind; Thirdly, the fire; Fourthly, the water and Fifthly, the dust. And, in the Indian language these are called Pānch Bhūt 1, namely, akās 2, bā'ī 3, tej 4, jal 5, and pirthī 6. (Now) there are three $ak\bar{a}s$: $bh\bar{u}t$ $ak\bar{a}s$, man $ak\bar{a}s$, and chid $ak\bar{a}s$; and (of these) $bh\bar{u}t \ ak\bar{a}s$ is surrounding the elements, man $ak\bar{a}s$ is encircling the whole existence and chid akas is enveloping all and is covering everything. This chid akas is permanent, namely, it is not transitory and there is no Kur'ānic or Vedic verse (which is a revealed book) testi-The first thing to come out of fying to its annihilation or destruction. chid akās was Love (or 'Ishk), which is called $m\bar{a}y\bar{a}^{10}$ in the language of the Indian monotheists; and "I was a hidden treasure, then I desired to be known; so, I brought the creation into existence"--this is a proof of the above statement. From 'Ishk (Love), ($R\bar{u}h$ -i-A'zam) jīv $\bar{a}tm\bar{a}n^{11}$, the great soul was born, by which is understood a reference to the soul of Muhammad and (further) to the "complete soul" of the Chief (of the Faithful)-may peace be on him and salutation. And the Indian monotheists name him Hiran Garbha 12 and Avasthat 13, which denote After that comes the element ('unsur) of wind, which his greatness. is said to be the breath of the Merciful (Rahmān) from which springs At the time of breathing it came out hot, on account air mundane. of its confinement in His August Self, fire came out of air; and, as the same breath possessed the qualities of mercy and unity, it became cold and, as such, water was created from fire. And as, on account of their great purity, the elements of air and fire are hardly perceptible and as water is more perceptible than either, some have held that, water was created first, followed by the element of dust. This dust is likened to the froth of that water and resembles the milk which, when put on fire, boils and froths.

40 [11. 6]

(Quite) unaware was I that this limitless ocean would be such. That its vapour would turn out to be the sky and its foam would become the earth.

Next:

An egg-like drop heaved and was turned into an ocean, Its foam produced the earth and its smoke gave rise to the sky.

And, as against this, on the day of the Great Resurrection, which the Indians call $mah\bar{a}$ parti ¹, the dust will be destroyed first, being swallowed by water; water being dried up by fire; fire being extinguished by air and air being merged in $mah\bar{a}$ $ak\bar{a}s$ ² together with $R\bar{u}h$ -i-A'zam (or, 'the Great Soul'):

"Everything is perishable but His face (i.e. He) "." (And) "Everyone on it must pass away. And there will endure the face (i.e. the person) of thy Lord, the Lord of Glory and Honour "." So, the exception of wajh (or, His face) found in the above two verses, which purport to deal with the destruction of everything, points (unmistakably) to mahā akās, which does not admit of annihilation. And had it not been so, He would have said: "Everything is to be annihilated except Him"; but the specification of 'face' (found in the above verse) cannot but apply to mahā akās which constitutes the fine body of the Holy Self. Now, in the Indian language, earth is called divī, from which everything has been created and unto which everything will return; and, as stated in the Holy verse,: "From it We created you and into it We shall send you back and from it will We raise you a second time"."

II. DISCOURSE ON THE SENSES (Hawas).

Corresponding to these five elements, there are five senses called Panj-Indri⁶, in the Indian language. They are: (1) Shāmma (smelling); (2) Dhā'iḥa (tasting); (3) Bāṣira (sceing); (4) Sāmi'a (hearing) and (5) Lāmisa (touching), which are called gahrān ⁷, rasnā ⁸, chach ⁹, sarutar ¹⁰ and tvak ¹¹ respectively, in the Indian language, and their qualities of perception are named gandh ¹², ras ¹³, rūp ¹⁴, sabd ¹⁵ and spars ¹⁶. of these five senses is of the same genus as one of those elements and is also allied to them. Thus, the sense of smell is allied with dust; for the reason that none of the elements, except dust, possesses smell which is perceived only by Shāmma (or, the sense of smelling); Dhā'ika, (or, the sense of taste), is connected with water-(the taste of) water being perceived with our tongue; Bāsira, (or, the sense of sight), is connected with fire and, as such, colour is perceived by the eyes only, while luminosity is present in both; Līmisa, (or, the sense of touch), is connected with air, as the perception of all tangible things is through the air; (finally), Sāmi'a, (or, the sense of hearing), is connected with 'the great element' ('Unsur-i-A'zam), namely mahā akās 1, through whose instrumentality we hear sounds. And it is through the sense of hearing that the real essence of mahā akās is manifested to the religious devotees, (Ahl-i-Dil), only, while no one else can realise it. Such exercise is common to the Sufis and the Indian monotheists; the former naming it, Shauhl-i-Pās-i-Anfās², (or, the exercise of controlling the breath), and the latter calling it dhun 3 in their own phraseology.

Now, the internal senses also are five in number: Mushtarak (Common); Mutakhayyila (Imaginary): Mutafakkira (Contemplative); $H\bar{a}fiza$ (Retentive) and $W\bar{a}hima$ (Fancying); but in the Indian system, however, they are four in number, namely, $budh^4$, man^5 , $ahank\bar{a}r^6$ and $chit^7$ —a combination of which is called antah $karan^8$ and this, in its turn, may be looked upon as the fifth. Now, chit is possessed of a characteristic, called sat $parkarat^6$, which is like its leg and, if cut, chit is prevented from running. (Of the above), (1) Budh, namely, understanding, possesses the characteristic of moving towards good and avoiding evil; (2) Man, or mind, possesses the two characteristics of $sankaip^{10}$ and $pakalp^{11}$, namely, of determination and abandonment (doubt) (3) Chit, which, as the messenger of mind, is entrusted with the duty of running on all sides does not possess the faculty of distinguishing between right and wrong; (4) $ahank\bar{a}r$, which attributes things to itself, is one of the qualities of paramālmā, for the reason that it possesses māyā, which, in their phraseology, is the name given to 'love.' Now Ahankar again is subdivided into three: Satag,2 Rajas,3 and, Tamas.4 First, Ahankar Satag, or Gayan Surup, 5 is the high stage when param atma says: "Whatever there is is I "-such is the stage of complete encircling of everything: "Now surely He encompasses all things." 6 Another (Holy Verse) says: He is the First and the Last and the Ascendant (over all) and the Knower of hidden things." Secondly, Ahankar Rajas, is maddhim, namely the middle stage, when (a religious devotee) having fixed his eyes on jīv ātmān 9 says: "My self is free from (the limitations of) body and elements, and corporeality has no access to me." "Nothing is like a likeness of Him" 10 (And) "Then surely Allah is Selfsufficient, above any need of the worlds." 11 Thirdly, Ahankar Tamas is adham, 12 or the low stage of awiddiya, 13 namely of servitude to the August Self; and its inferiority is due to the fact that a man, on account of his great degradation, limitation and subjectivity. attributes folly, ignorance and carelessness to himself and, having an eye on his sense existence, speaks out in such a manner that, as a result of it, "I" and "Thou" are rent apart from their point of unity. "Say: I am only a mortal like you." 14 Consequently, Bashist 15 says that when the Lord desired to be determined. He was transformed into param ātmā immediately on His thinking of it; and, on the increase of this determination, the stage of ahankar was attained and, when a second determination was added to it, it got the name of mahātat 16 or "'Aķl-i-Kul" (Perfect Wisdom). Now, man 17, or mind, which is also styled parakari, 18 was created from sankalp 19 and mahātat; and from sankalp man, the five Gayān-i-Indrī 20, namely, (the senses of) smell, touch, seeing, hearing and taste, were created; and, from a combination of sankalp and the five Gayan-i-Indri, the limbs and bodies were created, which, in their combined form, are named badan, or body. So, $Param-\bar{a}tm\bar{a}$ —who is called $Abul-Arw\bar{a}h$ has enforced by His Own will all these limitations on Himself and has tied Himself to these; and, just as a silk-worm, having brought out threads of silk from its own spittle, confines itself to them, so our Lord has created all these imaginary limitations for Himself and has confined Himself to them; or, just as the seed of a tree having produced a plant out of itself, enters the tree and remains in the branches and the leaves and the flowers of the tree, (so our Lord has confined Himself in this world). Thus, know and be mindful (of the fact) that before its creation, this world of ours was concealed in His Self and now His Holy Self is concealed in the world.

III. DISCOURSE ON THE DEVOTIONAL EXERCISES ($A\underline{sh}\underline{gh}\overline{a}l$).

Although, according to the Indian monotheists, there are several kinds of devotional exercises, yet they regard $ajp\bar{a}^2$ as the best of all. This exercise originates from every living being, both in sleep and wakefulness, without any will or control, at every moment—and always. Consequently, the Holy verse,: "And there is not a single thing but glorifies Him with His praise, but you do not understand their glorification"3, refers to this very fact. The incoming and outgoing of breath have been interpreted in two words—the breath that comes out is called \bar{U} (i.e. He) and the breath that goes in is named Man (i.e. I); and (their combination) " \bar{U} manam" (i.e. i) means "He is I." The Sūfis consider their occupation in these two words as $H\bar{u}$ Allāh (i.e. He is God)— $H\bar{u}$ appearing while the breath comes in and $All\bar{u}$ when it goes out. And these words are being uttered by every living being, without his being conscious of the fact.

IV. DISCOURSE ON THE ATTRIBUTES OF GOD, THE MOST HIGH $(Sif\bar{a}t\text{-}i\text{-}All\bar{a}h\ Ta'\bar{a}l\bar{a})$.

According to the Sūfis, there are the two divine attributes of Beauty $(Jam\bar{a}l)$ and Majesty $(Jal\bar{a}l)$, which encircle the whole creation, while, according to Indian devotees, there are three attributes (of God). collectively called tirgun 1, or sat2, raj3 and tam4, which mean Creation, Duration, and Destruction; the Suffs, (on the other hand), viewing, and accepting the quality of Duration as the attribute of Beauty (or, Jamal). But, as these attributes are included in one another, the Indian devotees name them tirmurat 5, or Barhma 6, Bishun 7 and Mahīsh 8, who are identical with Jibra'īl, Mīkā'īl and Isrāfīl of Sūfi phraseology. Barhmā, or Jibra'īl, is the (superintending) angel of Creation; Bishun, or Mīkā'il, is the angel of Duration (or Existence); Mahīsh. or Isrāfīl is the angel of Destruction. Now, water, wind and fire are also allied with these (superintending) angels—thus water goes with Jibra'il. fire with Mīkā'il and air with Isrāfil: and these three things (i.e. water, fire and air) are manifest in all living beings. Thus, Barhma, who appears as the water (or, moisture) of the tongue, is the cause of Divine utterance and is (further) the source of the power of speech; Bishun, who is (like) fire in the eyes, is the source of light, refulgence and eyesight; Mahīsh, who is the air in the nostrils, is instrumental in creating the two blowing horns, namely the two breaths, which, if cut off (or stopped), lead to death.

¹ Cf. Sa'duddîn Maḥmūd Shabistari's Gulshan-i-Rāz, where he says: "Is not, after all, the Necessary Being a part of Existence? For (now) Existence has concealed His Self!" 2 Ajapā. 3 Ķur'ān, Ch. XVII: 44.

Now, tirgun, which constitutes the three Divine attributes of Creation, Duration and Destruction, is manifested through Barhmā, Bishun and Mahīsh, whose attributes (in their turn) are manifest in all the creations of the world. (Thus), when a creature is born, it lives for an appointed period and then it is annihilated Shakt, or the potential power of the (above) three attributes is called tirdivī. Now, tirmūrat 10 gave birth to Barhmā, Bishun and Mahīsh, while tirdivī was the mother of these three: Sarastī 11, Pārbatī 12 and Lachmī. (Of the latter) Sarastī is connected with Rajūgun 14 and Barhmā, Pārbatī with Tamūgun 15 and Mahīsh and Lachmī with Satūgun 16 and Bishun.

V. DISCOURSE ON THE SOUL $(R\tilde{u}\dot{h})$.

The soul is of two kinds: (i) a (common) soul and (ii) the Soul of souls, $(Abul-Arw\bar{a}h)$, which are called $\bar{a}tm\bar{a}$ and $param\bar{a}tm\bar{a}$, respectively, in the phraseology of the Indian divines. When the 'Pure Self' ($\underline{Dh}\bar{a}t$ -i-Baht) becomes determinate and fettered, either in respect of purity or impurity, He is known as $r\bar{u}h$ (soul), or $\bar{a}tm\bar{a}$, in His elegant aspect and jasd (body), or sarir, in His in-elegant aspect. And the self that was determined in Eternity Past is known as $R\bar{u}h$ -i-A'zam (or, the Supreme Soul) and is said to possess uniform identity with the Omniscient Being. Now, the Soul in which all the souls are included is known as $param\bar{a}tm\bar{a}$ or Abul- $Arw\bar{a}h$ (i.e. the Soul of Souls). The inter-relation between water and its waves is the same as that between body and soul or as that between $sar\bar{i}r$ and $\bar{a}tm\bar{a}$. The combination of waves, in their complete aspect, may (very aptly) be likened to Abul- $Arw\bar{a}h$ or $param\bar{a}tm\bar{a}$; while water only is (just) like the August Existence, or sudh or chitan.

VI. DISCOURSE ON THE AIR $(B\bar{a}d)$.

As the air, which moves within the human body, remains in five places, so, it has got five names, namely $par\bar{a}n$, $^4ap\bar{a}n$, $^5sam\bar{a}n$, $^6ud\bar{a}n$ and $vay\bar{a}n$. (1) $Par\bar{a}n$, which is the movement of air from the nostrils up to the toes, possesses the characteristic of breathing. (2) $Ap\bar{a}n$ whose movement is from the buttocks up to the special organ, is entireling the navel, and is, moreover, the cause of life. (3) $Sam\bar{a}n$ moves inside the breast and the navel. (4) $Ud\bar{a}n$ moves from the threat up to the top of the brain (or, the duramater). (5) (Lastly), $Vay\bar{a}n$, is that air; which is penetrating everything, whether manifest or hidden.

VII. DISCOURSE ON THE FOUR WORLDS ('Awxin - Arriva')

According to certain Sūfis, the worlds, through which all me created beings must needs pass, are four in number. The is the five Human World), Malakūt (the Invisible World): World is the Human World), Malakūt (the Invisible World); but, according to the Similitude ('ālam-i-mill' leader the five in all—the World of Similitude ('ālam-i-mill' leader the five in all—the world of Similitude is also that Invisible world, regard them (i.e. the worlds is invisible world, regard them (i.e. the worlds is invisible to the Indian divines, the state of the worlds, consists of four worlds, consists of four the state of the worlds.

Sakhūpat 1 and $Tury\bar{a}$. (Of these), (1) $J\bar{a}gart$ is identical with $N\bar{a}s\bar{u}t$ (or, the Human World), which is the world of manifestation and wakefulness; (2) Sapan,, which is identified with Malakūt (or, the Invisible World), is the world of souls and dreams; (3) $Sakh\bar{u}pat$ is identical with $Jabar\bar{u}t$, (or, the Highest World), in which the traces of both the worlds disappear and the distinction between "I" and "Thou" vanishes—whether you see it with your eyes open or closed. There are many devotees of both the communities who have no information regarding this world. Accordingly, Sayyid-ut-țā'ifa, Ustād Abul Ķāsim,3 (May his soul rest in sanctity) has informed us that he said, "Tasawwuf consists in sitting for a moment without an attendant." The Shaikh-ul-Islām 4 asked "What does 'without an attendant' mean?" He explained "(It means) finding without seeking and beholding without seeing, for the (employment of) eyes in beholding (God) is an infirmity. So, 'sitting without an attendant' means that the marks of the Human World ('ālam-i-nāsūt) and of the Invisible World ('ālam-i-malakūt) may not enter the mind (of the beholder.)" And, Mawlana-i-Rum, (May God hallow his grave), has also hinted at the same point:

"If thou desirest to find him, then do not seek for a moment,
(And) if thou wishest to know Him, then do not know for a moment.

When thou seekest Him secretly, thou art far from His manifestation.

And when thou seekest Him openly, thou art hidden from His secrets.

³ Abul Kāsim b. Muḥammad b. al-Junaid al-Kharrāz al-Kawārīrī, the great mystic of Baghdād was a nephew of Sarī as-Saķatī and a pupil of ash-Shāfi'ī. He died at Baghdād in 297 A.H. (910 A.D.). See Jāmī's Nafaḥāt, p. 81. The saying, ascribed here to Junaid, is quoted, with Shaikh-ul-Islām's explanation, on p. 82 of Jāmī's Nafaḥāt. It appears that Dārā himself considered the above 'saying' as very important, for in three of his works i.e. Risāla-i-Ḥaķ Numā (p. 21); Ḥasanāt-ul-ʿĀrifīn (fol. 18 b of A.S.B. copy No. III 10) and Sakīnat-ul-Āwliyā (p. 46 of Urdū translation), he quotes that in full.

⁴ Shaikh-ul-Islām Abū Ismā'il 'Abdullāh b. Muhammad al-Anṣārī al-Harawī was born on the 2nd Sha'bān 396 A.H. (1006 A.D.) He is the author of several Ṣūfī works but his fame mainly rests on his extremely popular Munājāt. His lectures on the life and doctrines of the Ṣūfīs, which were embodied in a book and entitled Tabaḥāt-i-'Abdullāh Anṣārī, form one of the main sources of Jāmī's Nafaḥāt. (For details see J.A.S.B., 1922, pp. 385-391). He died in 481 A.H. (1088 A.D.).

And when thou comest out of the hidden and the manifest, so, undoubtedly,

Stretch thy legs and sleep comfortably in His protection.

(Now) (4) $Tury\bar{u}$ is identical with $L\bar{u}h\bar{u}t$, (or, the World of Divinity), which is (identical with) Pure Existence, encircling, including and covering all the worlds. If a person journeys from the $N\bar{u}s\bar{u}t$ (or, the Human World) to the $Malak\bar{u}t$ (or, the Invisible World) and from $Malak\bar{u}t$ to the $Jabar\bar{u}t$ (or the Highest World) and from this last to the $L\bar{u}h\bar{u}t$ (or, the World of Divinity), this will be considered as a progress, on his part. But, if the Truth of Truths, whom the Indian monotheists call $avasan^4$, descends from the stage of $L\bar{u}h\bar{u}t$ (or, Divinity) to that of $Malak\bar{u}t$ (Invisibility) and thence to $Jabar\bar{u}t$ (or, the Highest Heaven), His journey terminates in $N\bar{u}s\bar{u}t$ (or, the World of Humanity). And the fact that certain $S\bar{u}ft$ have described the stages of descent as four, while others as five, is a reference to this (very) fact.

VIII. DISCOURSE ON SOUND $(\bar{A}wz)\bar{a}$.

Sound emanates from the same breath of the Merciful which came out with the word Kun^2 , (or. Bc), at the time of the creation (of the universe). The Indian divines call that sound Sarasti, which, (they say), is the source of all other sounds, voices, and vibrations:

"Wherever thou hearest, it is His melodious voice, Who has, after all, heard such a rolling sound?"

According to the Indian monotheists, this sound, which is called $N\bar{a}d$, is of three kinds. First, $An\bar{a}hat$, which has been in Eternity Past, is so at Present, and will be so in Future. The Şūfis name this sound, $\bar{A}w\bar{a}z$ -i-Mutlat (or, the sound of the Absolute), or $Sult\bar{a}n$ -ul- $Adhk\bar{a}r^4$ (i.e. the Sultān of all devotional exercises). This (sound) is

² According to Muhammadan belief, the world owes its origin to the Will of God which was expressed by the word Kun, or, Be. So runs the Holy verse: "Wonderful Originator of the heavens and the earth; and when He decrees an affair, he only says to it, Be, so there it is." (Kur'ān, Ch. II: 117.)

⁴ Sulțūn-ul-Adhkūr—Among the Şūfis there is a peculiar exercise of the 'tuition of the breath' called Sulțūn-ul-Adhkūr. It is said to be even more difficult than Shaghl-i-Pūs-i-Anfūs, which has been discussed before.

IX. Discourse on Light (Nûr).

Light (nūr) is of three kinds; if it is manifested with the attribute of Jalāl (Majesty), it is either sun-coloured, ruby-coloured, or fire-coloured; and, if manifested with the attribute of Jamāl (Beauty), it is either moon-coloured, pearl-coloured, or water-coloured; and, (lastly) comes the Light of the Essence which is devoid of all (such) attributes, and is not manifested to any one, except the Holy men in whose favour God (the Most High and Holy) has declared; "Allāh guides to His light whom He pleases."

This is the Light which appears (at the time) when a man, either in sleep or with the eyes closed, neither beholds anything with his eyes nor hears with his ears nor speaks with his tongue nor smells with his nose nor feels with his sense of touch, and, as a matter of fact, performs all these functions, in sleep, with only one faculty and does not require the aid of, either the limbs, the external faculties or the light of a lamp; and the senses of sight, hearing, taste, smell and touch become merged in one-such is the Light of Essence, or, in other words, the Light of God. Exalted is His Dignity! O my friend! reflect on what I have said, as it is a matter of discernment and meditation. And, the Prophet of God, may His blessings and peace be on him, has said in praise of this reflection that, "A moment's engagement in meditation is better than the devotion of a whole year "1 i.e., of the human beings and the fairies. Now, the 'Light' discernible from the Holy verse "Allah is the light of the hervers and the earths," is called jun surups, savaparakas!, and superprakts by the Hindus, which (Light) is always effulgent by itself, whether appearing in the world or not. Accordingly, the Sūfis have explained nur (Light) by the word munawirar (Illumined), and the Hindus also have explained in the same manner. The Holy version this point is, as follows: " Allah is the light of the heavens and the enth; a library of His light is as a niche in which is a lamp, the large is in a glass, (and) the glass is as it were a brightly shining star, lit ir mea bless I olin steer, neither eastern nor western, the oil whereof almost gives light though fire toughes it not-light upon light-Allah auides to ed, says, in defining soul, that the 'glass' of soul is so luminous that it need not be touched with the fire of the Human World (nar-i-nasūt) and it is imminent that, on account of its inherent potency, it may, automatically, be illumined. This light of Zait (olive-oil) is "light upon light" ($n\bar{u}r$ -un-'al \bar{a} $n\bar{u}r$), which signifies that, on account of its extreme purity and brightness, it is light full of light; and no one can behold Him with this light, unless He guides (and directs) him with the Light of His unity. So the main purport of a combination of all these verses is that God, the Most High and Holy, is manifest, with the Light of His Essence, in elegant and refulgent curtains and there is no veil or darkness concealing Him. Now, the Light of (His) Essence is manifest in the curtain of Soul of Souls (Abul-Arwah), the Soul of Souls in the curtain of Soul $(R\bar{u}h)$ and the Soul in the curtain of Body—(exactly) in the manner in which the 'lamp' is luminous and manifesting itself within the cover of 'glass'; the glass being placed in a niche (tākcha), deriving its illumination from the Light of His Essence and thus adding light to light $(n\bar{u}r\text{-}un\text{-}'al\bar{a}\ n\bar{u}r).$

X. DISCOURSE ON THE VISION OF GOD (Rūyat).

The Indian monotheists call the Vision of God, Sāchātkār¹, that is, Know that the to see God with the (ordinary) eyes of the forehead. Vision of God, either by the Prophets, may peace be on them, or by the perfect divines, may their souls be sanctified, whether in this or the next world and whether with the outer or the inner eyes, cannot be doubted or disputed; and the "men of the Book" (ahl-i-kitāb), the perfect divines and the seers of all religions—whether they are believers in the Kur'an, the Vedas, the Book of David or the Old and the New Testaments-have a (common) faith in this respect. Now, one who disbelieves the beholding of God is a thoughtless and sightless member of his community, the reason being: if the Holy Self is Omnipotent, how can He not have the potency to manifest Himself? This matter has been explained very clearly by the 'Ulama of the Sunni Sect. But, if it is said, that (even) the Pure Self (dhāt-i-baht) can be beheld, it is an impossibility; for the Pure Self is elegant and undetermined, and, as He cannot be determined, He is manifest in the veil of elegance only, and as such cannot be beheld, and such beholding is an impossibility. And the suggestion that He can be beheld in the next and not in this world, is groundless, for if He is Omnipotent, He is potent to manifest Himself in any manner, anywhere and at any time He likes. (I hold) that one who cannot behold Him here (i.e., in this world) will hardly behold Him there (i.e. in the next world); as He has said in the Holy verse: "And whoever is blind in this, he shall (also) be blind in the hereafter." 1

The $Mu'tazila^2$ and the $Sh\bar{v}a^3$ doctors, who are opposed to $r\bar{u}yat$ (Beholding), have committed a great blunder in this matter, for had they only denied the capability of beholding the Pure Self, there would have been some justification, but their denial of all forms of ruyat (i.e. Beholding) is a great mistake; the reason being that most of the Prophets and perfect divines have beheld God with their ordinary eyes and have heard His Holy words without any intermediary and, now, when they are, by all means, capable of hearing the words of God, why should they not be capable of beholding Him? Verily, they must be so; and, just as it is obligatory to have faith in God, the Angels, the (revealed) Books, the Prophets, the Destiny, the Good and the Evil, and the Holy Places, etc., so it is obligatory and incumbent to have faith in $r\bar{u}yat$ (Beholding). The unversed Sunnt 'Ulamā who have disputed the meaning and wording of the tradition-in which 'A'isha Siddika' asked Prophet (Muhammad), Peace be on him,: "Didst thou behold thy Lord?" to which the Prophet replied, "It is light that I am beholding" have read it as نور اني اراه It is Light, how can I behold "It is Light, how can I behold it?" But this (tradition) cannot be an argument against beholding God, for if we put the former interpretation it will refer to His "complete beholding" (rūyat-i-tām) in the veil of Light but, if we interpret it as, "It is Light, how can I behold it?," it will refer to His Pure and Colourless Self. So, it is not a difference in the context but rather a manifestation of the miracle of (our) Prophet who has explained two problems in one tradition. And the Holy verse: "(Some) faces on that day shall be bright, Looking to their Lord" 2 is a clear argument in favour of runat, (Beholding), of our Lord, Exalted is His Dignity; (while) the verse: "Vision comprehends Him not, and He comprchends all vision; and He is the knower of subtilities, the Aware"3 refers to his colourlessness, that is, the eye cannot behold Him in his Colourless and Absolute capacity, although He beholds all and possesses extreme elegance and colourlessness. And, the word huwa (He), found in the above Holy verse, refers to the invisibility of His Pure Self. Now, the beholding of God is of five kinds: first, in dream with the eyes of heart; secondly, beholding Him with the ordinary eyes; thirdly, beholding Him in an intermediate state of sleep and wakefulness, which is a special kind of Selflessness; fourthly, (beholding Him) in (a stage of) special determination; fifthly, beholding the One Self in the multitudinous determinations of the internal and external worlds. such a way beheld our Prophet, may peace be on him, whose 'self' had disappeared from the midst and the beholder and the beheld had merged in one and his sleep, wakefulness and selflessness looked as one and his internal and the external eyes had become one unified whole-such is the state of perfect suyit? (Beholding), which is not confined either to this or the next world and is possible everywhere and at every period.

XI. Discourse on the Names of God, the Most High (Asmāi Allāh Tajālā).

Know that the names of God, the Most High, are numberless and beyond comprehension. In the language of the Indian divines, the Absolute, the Pure, the Hidden of the hidden and the Necessary Self is known as as an interpretation in itemplars, niranjans, sats and chits If knowledge is attributed to Him, the Indian divines designate Him as chitans, while the Muslim call Him Alim (Knowing). For Al-Half (the Truth) they have (the word) anants; for Kādir (the Powerful) they have smarth in for Sacii (the Hearkener) they have sarutā in and for Basir (the Beholder) they have drachtā in If spirit is attributed to that Absolute Self, they call Him wiktā in Allāh (God)

a se the country for the administration of the

Now, Ha last Miyān Jiv told Dāra Shikāh that if the first interpretation is put on the words of the Prophet, then it will refer to the Pure Self, and such beholding is an impossibility even for the Prophets; but if the second interpretation is put, then it means that 'He can be seen when he descends and appears in veil or guise.' Dārā Shikāh has summed up his views on the subject of Rāyat in the following quatrain which I quote from his Sakinat-ul-Awliyā, (p. 61):

"Those who will behold God in that (Future) time,

Know that at first they behold Hun in this world;

The vision of God is identical, whether in this or the next (world),

Every moment they see Him, open and secretly."

they call um^{1} : $H\bar{u}$ (He) they call sah^{2} and they designate Firishta (i.e. angel) as divatā 3, in their language. The 'perfect manifestation' (mazhar-i-atam) is called awtar 4, through whom the Majesty of God is manifested in such a way as would not be manifested, in any other individual of his class, in that particular period. Wahi (Divine Revelation) which dawns on the Prophets, is called akas $b\tilde{a}n\tilde{i}^{5}$: and this name (akās $b\tilde{a}n\tilde{i}$) is given to it for the reason that our Prophet, may peace be on him, has said: the severest moment for me is that of Wahi (or, Divine Revelation), when I hear Wahi ringing in my ears like the sound of a bell or the buzzing of wasps; so this voice, descending from heaven, is called akas bani. They call the Heavenly Books Ved, and the beautiful ones of the jins (Geniis), who are the paris, are called anchrant 6, while the evil ones, who are the demons and the devils, are called rāchas.7 Manukh 8, according to them, are the human beings, while $rikh\bar{i}^{\,0}$ is a mystic and $mah\bar{a}$ sudh ¹⁰, an Apostle.

XII. DISCOURSE ON APOSTLESHIP AND SAINTSHIP (Nubuwwat wa Wilāyat).

Apostles may be divided into three classes: first, those who might have beheld God either with the outer or the inner eyes; secondly, those who might have heard the voice of God, either sound only or sound, composed of words; thirdly, those who might have seen the angels or heard their voice.

Now, Apostleship and Saintship is of three kinds: (1) Pure (tanzīhī) Apostleship; (2) Resembling (tashbihī) Apostleship and (3) a combination of Pure and Resembling Apostleships.

First, Pure (tanzīlā) Apostleship, like which was the Apostleship of Noah, May peace be on him, who beheld God in purity (tanzīh) and invited people (to embrace his religion) but, except a few, they did not accept his faith, on account of his (tanzīh) ('pure beholding'), and, (as a result), were sunk in the ocean of destruction. Similarly, the divines of our day invite disciples to a 'pure beholding' of God, but none of those disciples ever attains the stage of an 'Ārif, nor is he benefited by their discourses and, dying on the way of Suluk (journey) and Tarīķat (Path)ā never reaches God.

Secondly, Resembling (tribbih) Apostleship, like the Apostleship of Moses, May peace be on him, who saw God Himself in the fire of the tree and heard words from the clouds. A large section of the followers of Moses, having become Anthropomorphists, began worshipping the cow and committed sin. Now-a-days, some of our followers (mukallidin) whose only profession in life is (blind) following, having fallen aside from purity (tanzīh), have been sunk in Anthropomorphism, and, as such, indulge in seeing handsome and attractive faces and (pass their time) in playing and toying. One should never follow such persons.

Verses:

"Every heart-attracting face that thou beholdest.

The sky will soon remove it from before thy eyes;

Go, and give thy heart to one, who, in the circle of existence,

Has remained always with thee and will so continue to be."

Thirdly, a combination of Pure (tanzīhī) and Resembling (tashbīhī) Apostleships, like the Apostleship of Muḥammad, May peace be on him and salutation, who joined together the Absolute (muṭlaḥ) and the Determined (muḥayyad), the Colourless and the coloured, the Near and the Distant. There is a reference to this very dignity, in the Holy verse: "Nothing is like a likeness of Him; and He is the Hearing, the Seeing." 1 The former, i.e. "Nothing is like a likeness of Him," is a reference to His Purity (tanzīh) and the latter, i.e. "He is the Hearing, the Seeing," is one to that of Resembling (tashbih). This is the highest and the loftiest stage of Universality and Perfection, which was reserved for that lord (Muhammad), Peace be on him. So, our Prophet has encircled the whole world, from (the remotest corner of) the east to the (farthest end) of the west. Now, Pure (tanzīhī) Apostleship is void of Resembling (tashbīhī) Apostleship, while Resembling Apostleship (in its turn) is void of Pure Apostleship; but the "Uniting" (jāmi') Apostleship combines both tanzīhī and tashbīhī Apostleships; as contained in the Holy verse: "He is the First and the Last and the Ascendant (over all) and the Knower of hidden things." 2 Similarly, Saintship is limited to the perfect ones of the sect in whose praise God, the Most High, has said: "You are the best of the nations raised up for (the benefit of) men,"3 namely, they are the best of My followers who combine tanzīh and tashbih. Thus, in the time of our Prophet, May peace of God and salutation be on him, there were, among the mystics, Abū Bakr,4 'Umar,5 'Uthman,6 'Ali,7 Hasan's and Husain,9 the Six Bakī (Sitta-i-Bakīya), the ten Congratulated ('Ashara-i-Mubashshara) 10 and the great ones of the muhājirs.11 the ansārs 12 and the Sūfis.

And in the time of the $T\bar{a}bi'\bar{i}n^{13}$ there were (saints) like Uwaisi-Karanī 14 and others; 15 and in another period saints like Dhun Nūn al-Miṣrī 16, Fuḍail b. 'Iyāḍ 17, Ma'rūf-i-Karkhī 15, Ibrāhīm Adham¹ 19, Biṣhr-i-Ḥāfī 20, Sarī as-Saķaṭī 21, Bāyazīd-i-Bisṭāmī 22, Ustād Abul Ķāsim Junaidī 23, Sahl b. (Biographical Notes to Section XII.)

- 4 Abū Bakr 'Abdullāh (surnamed 'Atīķ) was the first orthodox Caliph who succeeded Prophet Muḥammad in 632 A.D. He died on the 22nd Jamāda II, 13 A.H. =23rd August 634, and was buried beside the Prophet.
- 5 'Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb, the second orthodox Caliph, succeeded Abū Bakr in 13 A.H. (=634 A.D.). He ruled over the countries of Islām for ten years and was assassinated in 23 A.H., (644 A.D.).
- 6 'Uthmān b. 'Affān, the third orthodox Caliph, succeeded 'Umar on the 1st Muḥarram, 24 A.H.=7th November, 644 A.D., and was assassinated by some conspirators on the 18th Dhul Ḥijja, A.H. 35 = June 17th, A.D. 656. He is called Dhun Nūrain, or "the possessor of two lights," as he married two of the Prophet's daughters, Ruḥayya and Umm-i-Kulthām.
- 7 'Alī b. Abī Ṭālib was the fourth orthodox Caliph. He was a cousin and the son-in-law of the Prophet Muḥammad and was among the first few who embraced Islām. He became Caliph on the 25th Dhul Ḥijja, 35 A.H. = June 23rd, 656 A.D. and died on the 21st Ramaḍān, 40 A.H. = 27 January, 661 A.D., as a result of wounds inflicted by Ibn-i-Muljam. He is regarded by the Shī'as as the only lawful Caliph after the Prophet.
- ⁸ Ḥasan, the eldest son of 'Alī, and a grandson of Prophet Muḥammad, was born in 3 A.H. He succeeded 'Alī as Caliph in 40 A.D. and, after a rule of about six months, abdicated in favour of Muʿāwiya. He was, however, poisoned by his wife Ja'da, in 49 A.H.
- ⁹ Ḥusain, the second son of 'Alī and a grandson of Prophet (through Fāṭima) was born in 4 A.H. He was the rightful successor of Mu'āwiya, but the latter nominated Yazīd, his son, as successor, who slew Ḥusain, under the most tragic circumstances, at Karbalā, in 61 A.H. The martyrdom of Ḥusain is mourned every year by the whole Muslim world and, more specially, by the Shī'as, from the 1st to the 10th of Muḥarram.
- 10 'Ashara-i-Mubashshara, or the ten who received the glad tidings, is the title given to ten of the most eminent companions (aṣḥāb) of the Prophet, whose entry into Paradise was foretold by Muḥammad. They are: Abū Bakr, 'Umar, 'Uthmān, 'Alī, Ṭalḥa b. az-Zubair, 'Abdur Raḥmān, Sa'd b. Abī Wakkāṣ, Sa'īd b. Zaid, Abū 'Ubaida b. al-Jarrāḥ.
- 11 The $Muh\bar{a}jir\bar{i}n$ is the title given to those believers who emigrated to Medina from Mecca.
- 12 al-Anṣār, (lit. the helpers), or, more explicitly speaking, Anṣār-un-Nabī, is the title given to those 'believers of Medina who received and assisted the Prophet after his flight from Mecca' (621 A.D.). For details see the Encycl. of Islam, Vol. I, pp. 357, 358.

13 Tābì'īn (or, "the followers") is, in the language of the Muhaddithīn, or the traditionists, the title of those persons who met and conversed with one of the companions (ashāb) of the Prophet.

14 Uwais al-Karanī, the famous mystic, was a contemporary of Prophet Muhammad, who, as recorded in $Ta\underline{dh}kirat$ -ul- $Awliy\bar{a}$, had asked 'Umar and 'Alī to give his i.e. Prophet's murakka' to Uwais. Accordingly, 'Umar and 'Alī visited Uwais and gave him the cloak of the Prophet. He died between A.H. 32 and 39 (cf. $\underline{Khazinat}$ -ul- $Asfiy\bar{a}$, vol. ii, p. 120). (For details see $Ta\underline{dh}kirat$ -ul- $Awliy\bar{a}$ ed. Nicholson, vol. 15 In certain texts the name of Ḥanbal is given. Abū 'Abdullāh Aḥmad b. Ḥanbal, known as Imām Ḥanbal, the founder of the fourth school of Sunnī Jurisprudence, was born in A.H. 164 (= 780 A.D.). He was a favourite pupil of aṣh-Ṣhāfi'ī and enjoys considerable reputation as a traditionist and theologian. He stubbornly refused to subscribe to the new faith of al-Māmūn that the Ḥur'ān was created and thereby seriously endangered his life. His death took place at Baghdād, in 241 A.H. (= 855 A.D.), and it is said that 800,000 men and 60,000 women attended his funeral. (For details see Ibn Khallikān, de Slane's translation, vol. i, p. 44; Tadhkirat-ul-Awliyā, Nicholson, vol. I, pp. 214-219; Khazīnat-ul-Aṣfiyā, vol. I, pp. 64-66.

16 Dhun Nūn Abul Fā'id b. Ibrāhīm al-Miṣrī, whose real name was Thawbān, was a pupil of Mālik b. Anas. He lived in Egypt and died at Ghīra, in 245 A.H. = 860 A.D. He is well-known for his piety and sanctity, and Jāmī records several instances of his miraculous acts. His fame, however, mostly rests on the fact that Ṣūfī doctrines were first explained and expressed by him. (For details see Nafahāt, pp. 32-37; Tadhkirat-ul-Awliyā, ed. Nicholson, vol. I, pp. 114-134; Safinat-ul-Awliyā, pp. 126, 127; Kashf-ul-Mahjūb, tr. Nicholson, (Gibb Memorial Series), pp. 100-103.

Mūsā ar-Riḍā. He died at Baghdād on the 2nd or the 8th Muḥarram, A.H. 200. For further particulars regarding his life and teachings see $Tadhkirat-ul-Awliy\bar{a}$, ed. Nicholson, vol. quently, due to some sudden impulse, is reported to have abdicated and adopted the life of an ascetic. After his conversion to Şūfism, Ibrāhīm went to Syria where he died between 160 and 166 A.H. (= 776-783 A.D.). For further particulars see Tadhkırat-ul-Awliyā, ed. Nicholson, vol. I, pp. 85-106; Nafaḥāt, pp. 42-44; Khazīnat-ul-Aṣfiyā, vol. 40 Abul Jannāb Ahmad b. 'Umar al-Khiwāķī, commonly known as Shaikh Najmuddīn Kubrā, was the celebrated mystic of Khwārazm. His title "Kubrā" is derived from the name of "aṭ-ṭāmmat-ul-Kubrā", or "the supreme calamity", given him on account of his wonderful ability as a debater. Rūmī is also the author of a Dīwōn which is dedicated to the memory of his spiritual guide, the well-known Shams-i-Tabrīz. He died in February, 1231. For his life see Browne, Literary History of Persia, vol. II, pp. 515–525; Nafaḥūt, p. 409.

43 Muʿinuddīn Muḥammad Chishtī, who is considered by many as the greatest mystic of India, was born in 537 A.H.=1142 A.D. Having travelled in Khurāsān, he came to Baghdād and thence to Dihlī, (598 A.H. = 1193) and finally to Ajmīr, where he died in 633 = 1236. His tomb is visited every year by thousands of his votaries. He is the founder of the Chishtī order, which finds the largest number of votaries in India. A lithographed $D\bar{\imath}w\bar{a}n$, popularly ascribed to him, has been conclusively proved to be the work of Muʿīnuddīn Miskīn, the famous preacher of Hirāt and author of $Ma'\bar{a}rij$ -un-Nubuwwat.

47 Mīr Muḥammad b. Sā'īn Dātā, commonly known as Mīyān Mīr or Mīyān Jīv, was born in A.H. 938. He came to Lahore and stayed there for about sixty years. He was highly respected for his piety and was frequently visited by Shāh-Jahān and Dārā Shikūh. His death took place on the 7th Rabī' I,1045 A.H., at the ripe old age of 107. Dārā Shikūh has written a work, entitled Sakīnat-ul-Awliyā, dealing with the life of the saint and his disciples, and has also given a notice of the life of the saint in his Sajīnat-ul-Awliyā.

48 He was one of the spiritual teachers of Dūrā, and died on 15th Rabī', 1062, (Ḥasanāt-ul-'Arifīn, pp. 53-57.)

40 Mullā Shāh Muḥammad b. Mullā 'Abd Muḥammad, commonly known as Mullā Shāh or Lisānullāh, came from Badakhṣhān to Lahore in 1023 A.H. = 1614 A.D., and became a disciple of Mīyān Mīr, the great saint of the time. He was highly respected by Dārā Shikūh who was initiated by him into the Ķādirī order in 1049 A.H.=1639 A.D. After the death of Mīyān Mīr (1045 A.H.), Mullā Shāh retired to Kashmīr where he passed the remaining days of his life in a monastery built by Dārā Shikūh and his sister Jahān Ārā. He died in 1072 A.H.=1661-62 A.D. Mullā Shāh was a voluminous writer and has left a Dīwān, which has been lithographed, besides several works on Ṣūfism. (For his life see Sakīnat-ul-Awliyā, pp. 116-158.)

50 Shaikh Shāh Muḥammad Dilrubā is spoken of by Dārā Shikūh as one of his teachers (Ḥasanāt-ul-'Ārifīn, pp. 59-61) and considered as "unrivalled in Faķīrī, self-suppression, religious exercises, retirement and singularity." Further, he tells us that now-a-days (i.e., about 1064 A.H.) he has adopted a life of complete isolation and sees the face of none and speaks with visitors from behind the veil. Dārā records a number of very interesting sayings of the saint in his Ḥasanāt-ul-'Ārifīn (pp. 59-61).

51 Shaikh Țayyib Sarhindī receives very scanty notice in the Ḥasanāt-ul-'Ārifīn of Dārā Shikūh. There, (p. 45 of the Urdū text), he is spoken of as a friend of Bābā Piyāray and as one who narrated several very interesting anecdotes of the Bābā. Beyond this, I have not been able to get any other information regarding the life of this Shaikh.

52 Bāwā Lāl Bairāgī was a Hindū saint who was held in high esteem by Dārā Shikūh. For his life and the conversations that he had with Dārā Shikūh see Introduction.

XIII. DISCOURSE ON Barhmand.

By Barhmānd is meant "All" (kul), which (term) applies to the determination of the Necessary Self in the shape of a round globe and, as it is not inclined towards or joined to any one, its proportion to all is equal and every creation and exhibition takes place in its midst—hence the name Barhmānd, given to it by the Indian monotheists.

XIV. DISCOURSE ON THE DIRECTIONS ($Jih\bar{a}t$).

The Muslim monotheists regard the East, the West, the North, the South, the top and the bottom as each a separate direction. Hence, according to them, there are six directions, while, according to the reckoning of the Indian monotheists, there are ten directions (in all). They consider the space between the East, the West, the North and the South as each a separate direction and, accordingly, name them $dah \ dish\bar{a}^{1}$.

XV. DISCOURSE ON THE SKIES $(\bar{A}sm\bar{a}nh\bar{a})$.

According to the Indians, the skies, which are called Gagan², are eight in number. Of these, seven are the stations of the seven planets, namely, Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, Sun, Venus, Mercury and the Moon. In the Indian language, however, they are called the seven nichattars,³ that is, sanīchar⁴, birahspat⁵, mangal⁶, sūraj⁷, sukur⁸, budh⁹, and chandramās. ¹⁰ Now, the sky which contains all the fixed stars is regarded as the eighth and the learned men call this very sky 'the eighth sphere', or, 'the sphere of fixed stars' (falak-i-thawābit), while the Muḥammadan religious doctors (ahl-i-shar') designate it Kursī in their own phraseology. (So runs the Holy verse): "His Kursī (throne) extends over the heavens and the earth." ¹¹

The ninth (sky), which is called $mah\bar{a} \ ak\bar{a}s^{12}$, has not been included in the (list of) skies; the reason being that it (i.e. $mah\bar{a} \ ak\bar{a}s$) encircles all and even the $Kurs\bar{i}$, the skies and the earths are contained in it.

XVI. DISCOURSE ON THE EARTH (Zamin).

According to the Indians, the earth has been divided into seven layers, called Sapat tāl 13, each of which is named atal 14, batal 15, ¹ Daśa diśah. 2 Gagana. 3 Nakṣatra. 4 Sanaiścara. 5 Bṛhaspati.

⁶ Mangala. 7 Sūrya. 8 Sukra. 9 Budha. 10 Candramas.

66 [II. 32]

and rivers, are called $Sarag^1$ by the Indian doctors, which, in other words, is called Bihisht or Jannat (i.e. Paradise) (by the Muslims). Now, the land, the river and the mountain which are below (all) lands, mountains and the rivers, are known as $narak^2$, or $D\bar{u}za\underline{k}h$ and Jahan nam, that is, Hell and the infernal fire. The Indian monotheists have held that the Heaven and the Hell are not beyond this very universe (of ours), which we call $Barhm\bar{a}nd$ and (they further hold) that the seven skies, which are the stations of the seven planets, do not revolve above Paradise but (rather) round it. The roof of Paradise is called $man\ ak\bar{a}s$, that is 'Arsh, and its (i.e. Paradise) ground is called $Kurs\bar{\imath}$.

XVIII. DISCOURSE ON THE WORLD OF Barzakh (Interval between the Death of a Man and the Resurrection).

Our Prophet, may peace be on him and salutation, has said: "Whosoever dies, verily, there is resurrection for him."

After death, $\bar{a}tm\bar{a}$, or soul, having left the body of elements, enters, without any delay, the body of mult, which is called $S\bar{u}cham\ Sar\bar{i}r.^3$ It is a fine body, formed by our action—good action having a good and bad action having a bad form. Now, after "Question and Answer," (which will be made after death), those deserving of Paradise will be taken to Paradise, while those deserving of Hell to Hell; as stated in the Holy verse: "So as to those who are unhappy, they shall be in the fire; for them shall be sighing and groaning in it: Abiding therein so long as the heavens and the earth endure, except as thy Lord pleases; surely thy Lord is the mighty doer of what He intends. And as to those who are made happy, they shall be in the garden, abiding in it as long as the heavens and the earth endure, except as thy Lord pleases: a gift which shall never be cut off." \(^4\)

Now, "bringing out of hell," means that, before the destruction of the skies and the earths, He may, if He wishes, take out (the condemned person) from Hell and carry him to Paradise. In explaining this verse, Ibn Mas'ūd ⁵, may God be pleased with him, has said that "a period will come in the (life of) Hell when, after a long sojourn, no one will remain inside it." And, "bringing out of Paradise", means that, before the destruction of the skies and the earths, God may, if He wishes, bring up its occupants to the High Paradise (Firdaws-i-A'lā)—for His generosity is limitless. The following Holy verse is also a proof (of the above statement): "And best of all is Allāh's goodly pleasure—that is the grand achievement" 1—namely, that God has a Paradise which is larger than other Paradises.

The Indians call it *Baikunth*², which, in the opinion of the Indian monotheists, is the greatest salvation.

XIX. DISCOURSE ON THE RESURRECTION (Kiyāmat).

The Indian monotheists have held that, after a very long stay in Heaven or Hell, the mahā parlī ³, or the Great Resurrection, will take place, which (fact) is also ascertainable from the Holy verse (of the Kurʾān). "But when the Great Resurrection comes." ¹ The following verse also speaks of the same, "And the trumpet shall be blown, so all those that are in the heavens and all those that are in the earth shall swoon, except such as Allāh pleases." ⁵

This (exception) refers to the group of ' \overline{A} rifs (i.e. Knowers of God) who are immune from senselessness or thoughtlessness both in this and the next world. Now, after the upsetting of the skies, the destruction of the heavens and the hells and the completion of the age of $Barhm\bar{a}nd$, the occupants of Heaven and Hell will achieve $mukt^6$; that is, both will be absorbed and annihilated in the Self of the Lord, as stated in the Holy verse: "Every one on it must pass away. And there will endure for ever the person of thy Lord, the Lord of glory and honour."

XX. DISCOURSE ON Mukt (SALVATION).

Mukt means the annihilation and disappearance of determinations, in the Self of the Lord, as it appears from the Holy verse: "And best of all is Allāh's goodly pleasure—that is the grand achievement." 8

Now, entrance into Ridwan-i-Akbar, or the High Paradise, is a great salvation, called mukt. Mukt is of three kinds:

5 Kur'ān Ch. XXXIX: 68.

6 Mukti.

⁷ Kur'ān, Ch. LV: 26, 27. 8 Kur'ān, Ch. IX: 72,

First, Jiwan mukt 1, or salvation in life. According to them (i.e. the Indians), Jiwan mukt consists in one's attainment of salvation and freedom, by being endowed with the wealth of knowing and understanding the Truth, in seeing and considering everything of this world as one, in ascribing to God, and not to oneself, all (i.e. man's) deeds, actions, movements and behaviour, whether good or bad, and in regarding oneself, together with all other existing objects, as in complete identity with the Truth. Further, he should regard God as manifesting Himself in all the stages and should look upon Barhmand, which the Sufis call 'Alam-i-Kubra (or, the Great World) and is (moreover) the "Complete Form" of God, as the corporeal body of God. He should regard 'Unsur-i-A'zam (or the Great Element) namely, mahā akās, as Sūcham Sarīr², or the fine body of God, and should consider the Self of God as the soul of that body. Further, considering Him as One Fixed Person, he should behold or know nothing, save the Self of that Unique, Incomparable Lord, whether (it be) in a particle of dust or a mountain, whether in the manifest or the hidden world. Now, just as a human being, who is called the 'smaller world' ('Ālam-i-Ṣaghīr), is one individual, despite his various and numerous limbs and just as his personality is not multitudinous on account of his many limbs, so, that Unique Self cannot be considered multitudinous on account of the variety of determinations. (Verse):

"The whole world, whether of souls or bodies, Is One Fixed Person—called 'Ālam."

So, one should consider God, the Most Holy and High, Who is not separated even by a hair's breadth, as the soul and life of that "Fixed Person"; as is said by Shaikh Sa'duddīn Hummu'ī.³ Quatrain:

"Truth is the soul of the world, the whole world the trunk, Souls, angels and senses are the bodies.

The skies, the elements, the three Kingdoms of nature (i.e., animal, vegetable and mineral) and the bodies—

This is Monotheism and all else is device and artifice."

³ Sa'duddin b. al-Muwayyad Ḥummu'i was a great mystic and a writer of numerous works on Ṣūfism. A summary of 400 of his works, entitled Kashf-ul-Ḥaḥā'iḥ, is noticed in A.S.B. Catalogue of Persian MSS., p. 565. He died in 650 A.H. = 1253 A.D.

Similarly, the Indian monotheists, like Vayās¹ and others, having considered Barhmānd, which is 'Ālam-i-Kabīr (or the great world), as one individual self, have, accordingly, described the different limbs of its (i.e. Barhmānd's) body. The reason (of such description) is that whenever a pure mystic easts his eyes on anything he conceives that he is looking at a particular limb of mahā puras², that is, the Self of the Truth, Sanctified and Exalted is He.

is the two eve-brows of mahā puras; tap luk, which is above ian luk, is the forehead of mahā puras; and the sat luk, which is above all luks, is the skull of mahā puras; the verses of Tawhīd (monotheism) and the Book of God are the dura mater of maha puras; the black clouds, which carry the water of mahā parlī 1 (i.e., the great dissolution), are the hairs of mahā puras; the vegetation of all the luks is the hair of mahā puras' body; Lachmis, who is the wealth and adornment of the world, is the beauty of mahā puras; the shining sun is the purity of mahā puras' body; bhūt akās s are the pores of mahā puras' body; chid, akās is the soul of mahā puras' body; the form of every single human being is the abode of mahā puras; the perfect man is the closet and special abode of mahā puras; as He said to David, may peace be on him, "Oh David, build a house for (He) replied, "Oh God! Thou art exempt from habitation." (God) said, "Thou art my abode. Make thy house void of 'others'." The attributes, found in abundance in Barhmand, are present in man who is the epitome of "the Great World" ('Alam-i-Kabīr). In fine, one who beholds and understands in this way attains jiwan mukt 5, and the following verse (of the Kur'an) is in favour of the above: "Rejoicing in what Allah has given them out of His grace."6

Secondly, Sarab mukt, or the liberation from every kind of bondage, consists in absorption in His Self. This (salvation) is universally true in the case of all living beings, and, after the destruction of the sky, the earth, the Paradise, the Hell, the Barhmānd and the day and the night, they will attain salvation by annihilation in the Self (of the Lord). And the Holy verse: "And best of all is Allāh's goodly pleasure—that is the grand achievement," and "Now surely the friends of Allāh—they shall have no fear nor shall they grieve," is a reference to this very mukt, or salvation.

Thirdly, Sarbadā mukt 10, or later salvation, consists in becoming an Arif (i.e. knower of God) and in attaining freedom and salvation, in every stage of "progress" (sair), whether this (progress) be made in the day or the night, whether in the manifest or the hidden world, whether the Barhmānd appears or not and whether (it takes place) in the past, the present or the future i.e. bhût 1, bhusht 2, bartaman.3 And, wherever the Holy Kur'an speaks of Paradise, "Abiding therein (i.e. in januar) for ever "4, there, (the word) januar (Paradise) applies to matrifat (or, knowledge) of God and abadā (tot) refers to the perpetuity of this mult (or, salvation); the reason being that, in whatever state (one) may be, the capacity to know God (i.e. of mairifat) and to receive Eternal favour is (absolutely) necessary. Hence, the following two Holy verses have been revealed (to give good tidings) to such a group (of persons) as attain mult, or, salvation; "Their Lord gives them good news of mercy from Himself and (His) good pleasure and gardens, wherein lasting blessings shall be theirs; abiding therein for ever; surely Allah has a Mighty reward with Him " and, Give good news (Oh Prophet) to the believers who do good that they shall have a goodly reward; (i.e. a marifal, or, knowledge of God, the Most Holy and High, which, certainly, is a handsome reward for the ' \bar{A} rifs, namely, that of Firdaws-i- \bar{A} $l\bar{a}$) staying in it (i.e. in Firdaws is Alfa) for ever. XXI. Discourse on Day and Night (Ruz wa Shab).

Divinity of Creation and Concealment .- According to the Indian monotheists, the age of Barhma, who is identical with Gabriel, and the annihilation of Barhmand and the end of the "Day of Creation," or the "Day of Divinity," is eighteen anj years of the world, each anj (again) is equal to one thousand years, as mentioned in the two Holy verses of the Kur'an: " And surely a day with thy Lord is as a thousand years of what you number."? The other Holy verse is: "To Him ascend the angels and the Spirit (that is Jibra'il or Barhmā) in a day the measure of which is fifty thousand years," and each day of which consists of one thousand years, as may be deduced from the former verse (of the $Kur'\tilde{a}n$). So, according to my reckoning, the age of Gabriel and the duration of the life of Day and the whole Universe, which is identical with Barhmand, is (equal to) eighteen anj years of the world; each anj of which (in its turn) is equal to one thousand years—there being not the least increase or decrease. Such is the reckoning of the Indian monotheists. It must also be known that their (i.e. Indians') specification of the figure cighteen is based on (the figures) 'eight' and 'ten,' beyond which, they say, no thing can be counted. Now, "the Smaller Resurrections," that have taken place in the past and will so recur in future, are called khandh parli 1, which come either like the innundation of water or the conflagration of fire or the storm. And, after this period has elapsed, this day (of ours) will turn into evening and "the Great Resurrection," which they call mahā parlī, will take place; as ordained in the following two verses; "On the day when the earth shall be changed into a different earth;" 2 and " On the day when We will roll up heaven like the rolling up of the scroll for writings." 3 Now, after "the Great Resurrection," on the "Night of Concealment," which is parallel to the Day of Manifestation, all the "determinations" will be absorbed in the Self of the Lordits duration being equal to eighteen anj years of the world. And, the period of avasthatam 4, which is identical with sakhūpat and Jabarat, is equal to the age of the Lord, who is undisturbed by the creation of mortals or the destruction of the Universe; and the verse of the Kur'an: "Soon will We apply Ourselves to you, O you two armies (of jin and human beings)," 5 is a reference to this very sakhūpat. During the life of the earth, the Lord God dwells in the stage of Nāsūt (or, the Human World) and, during the period of "the Smaller Resurrections," in the stage of Malakūt (or, the Invisible World) and, after "the Great Resurrection, in Jabarūt (or, the Highest Heaven).

O my friend, whatever I have recorded in this chapter is the outcome of much painstaking and considerable research and is in accordance with my own inspiration, which, although you may have not read in any book or heard from any one, is also in conformity with the two (abovementioned) Holy verses (of the $Kur'\bar{a}n$). Now, if this (exposition) falls heavy on the ears of certain defective ones, I entertain no fear on that account: "Then surely Allāh is Self-sufficient, above any need of the worlds." 6

XXII. DISCOURSE ON THE INFINITY OF THE CYCLES (Adwar).

According to the Indian doctors, God, the Most High, is not confined to these days or these nights only but, that, when these nights will terminate, days will re-appear and when these days will terminate, nights will re-appear—this process continuing without end. This (process) is named anād parwāh 1 and Khwāja Ḥāfiṣ, may merey be on him, having his eye on this Infinity of cycles, has said:

"There is no end to my story, or to that of the beloved, For, whatever hath no beginning can have no end."

Now, whatever peculiarities of the manifestation and concealment of His Self have appeared in previous days and nights will also re-appear, in exactly the same manner, in the following days and nights, as stated in the Holy verse: "As We originated the first creation, (so) We shall reproduce it."?

So, after the termination of this cycle, the world of Adam, the father of men, will re-appear in exactly the same manner; and, as such, it will be endless. And, the verse of the Kur'an: " As He brought you forth in the beginning, so shall you also return", 3 is also an argument, proving the above (statement). If, however, any one doubts and says that the finality of our Prophet, may peace be on him, is not proved by this exposition, I will tell him that next day also, our Prophet, may peace be on him, will re-appear in an exactly similar manner and on that day (also) he will be called, "the Last of the Prophets." The following Tradition, which is narrated in connection with the night of Ascent ($Mi^{\alpha}r\tilde{a}i$), is an argument to this effect. It is said that our Prophet, may peace be on him, saw a line of camels, proceeding (in succession) without any break, and on each of which two bags were laden, in each of which there was a world like that of ours and in each such world there was a Muhammad (just) like him. (Our Prophet) asked Gabriel, "What is this?" (Gabriel) replied, "Oh Prophet of God! since my creation, I have been witnessing this line of camels proceeding with bags (laden on them), but, I am also unaware of their (real) significance." This, (as I believe), is a reference to the Infinity of the Cycles.

Praise be to God for His favours, Who granted me the grace of completing this tract, entitled Majma'-ul-Baḥrain, in the year 1065 A.H., which corresponds to the forty-second year of the age of this unafflicted and unsorrowing faķīr, Muḥammad Dārā Shikūh.

عوالم که جمیع مخلوقات را ناچار گذر بر آنست بطور بعضی از صوفیه چهار اند، ناسُوت و مَلکوت و جَبُروت ولاهُوت و بعضی پنج میکویند و عالم مثال را داخل میکنند، و جمعی که عالم مثال را با عالم ملکوت یکی می انگارند چهار میکویند، و بقولِ فقرای هند اوستهات که عبارت ازین عوالم اربعه باشد چهار اند، جاگرت و سَپُن و سُکهوپت و تُریا - جاگرت مناسب است بناسُوت که عالم ظاهر و عالم بیداری باشد، سپن موافق است بمکلوت که عالم ارواح و عالم خواب باشد، سکهوپت موافق است بجبروت که در آن نقوشِ هر دو عالم و تمیز "من" و "تو" نباشد خواه چشم وا کرده بینی خواه پوشیده، و بسیاری از نقرای هر دو قوم برین عالم مطّلع نیستند، چنانچه سیّد لطایفه اُستان ابوالقاسم جُنید بغدادی (۱) قُدِّسَ الله سُرهٔ خبر داده که نوموده

قول بالا كه بنام حضوت جنيد رح منقول است ، بر صفحه ۸۲ نفحات الأنس مع تشريح شيخ الاسلام موجود است و اغلب اين كه داراشكود آن را از نفحات نقل نمودد و معلوم

تصوّف آن بود که ساعتی بنشینی بی تیمار - (۱) شین الاسلام گفت که بی تیمار چه بود - فرصود که یانت بی جستن و دیدار بی نگریستن چه بیننده در دیدار علّت است، پس ساعتی بی تیمار نشستن همین است که نقوشِ عالمِ ناسوت و ملکوت در آن ساعت بخاطر نگذرند - و نیز آنچه مولانای روم قدّس الله سرّه فرموده اشاره بهمین معنی است:

خواهي که بيابي يک لحظه مجويش خواهي که بداني يک لحظه مدانش چون در نهانش جوئی دوري ز آشکارش چون آشکار جوئی محجوبي از نهانش چون ز آشکار و پنهان بيرون شوي ببرهان پاها دراز ميکن خوش خُسپ در امانش

ر تریا موافق است بلاهوت که ذات محف باشد و مُحیط و شامل و جامع و عین این هر سه عالم و اگر سیر انسان از ناستوت بمکنوت و از جَبُروت بلاهُوت باشد این ترقی ازوست و اگر حضوت حقیقت الحققایق که موحدان هذد آن را اَرَسَن گویند

میشود که داراشکولا این قول حضرت جنید را خیلی درست میداشت چه او در سه از تصنیفات خویش و یعنی رسالهٔ حق نها (صفحه ۲۱ نسخه مطبوعه نولکشور) حسنات العارفین (ورق ۸ ب و نسخه قلمی موجود و بوهار الائبریوی) و سکینه الاولیا (صفحه ۴۲ ترجمه اردو و مطبوعه الاهور) درج نمود و «

از مرتبهٔ لاهوت نزول فرماید و از جَبَرُوت و مَلَکُوت بلذرد سیرِ آو منتهی بعالم ناسُوت میشود و اینکه صوفیه صراتبِ نزول را بعضی چهار بعضی پذیج قرار داده اند اشاره باین معنی است .

١٠ - بيال رويت

[TRANSLATION]

Names of Persons.

In the following Index, prefixes like Abū, Ibn and Umm are disregarded in the alphabetical arrangement: thus, for example, names like Abul Ḥasan, Ibn-i-Muljam must be sought under H and M respectively, not under A and I. letter b, between two names stands for Ibn, "son of...," the letter d. coming after a person's name relates to his death, and c (circa) to the approximate date of his birth or death, as the case may be. A number placed in parenthesis, after the name of a ruler, relates to the beginning and end of his reign; and n after the number of a page indicates a footnote.

INDEX II

[TRANSLATION]

Technical Terms, Important Words, Sects, Şūfī Orders, etc.

In the following Index, Sanskrit words have been arranged as they are given in the Text, and not as they are written in Sanskrit; but an attempt has been made to transliterate them, wherever possible. Such proper names as Jibra'il or Mahīsh etc. have, for good reasons, been included in this list.
